Jobless Americans top 6 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate soared to 7.1 per cent of the work force in December as Americans without jobs totaled more than six million for the first time since the Great Depression, the government reported today.

The 7.1 per cent rate itself was the highest in 13 years.

Not since 1940 — when the nation was shaking off the effects of the Depression — have more than six million been unemployed. Some 8.1 million were jobless then, about 14.6 per cent of that era's smaller labor force.

The Labor Department said the December increase in the jobless rate, from 6.5 per cent in November, was the biggest monthly increase since October 1960 when the unemployment rate also rose six-tenths of a per cent.

The unemployment rate is now at its highest level since May 1961 when it also stood at 7.1 per cent. The last time it exceeded that level was during the 1958 recession when it hit 7.4 per cent in August of that year.

Heavy layoffs in the auto industry helped boost the number of unemployed last month by 560,000 to a total of 6.5 million. There were 5,975,000 workers unable to find employment in November, the government said.

President Ford, who returned Thursday night from a skiing vacation in the Rockies, will meet Saturday with his key economic policy advisers.

Today's job report is almost certain to receive much attention at the meeting. With unemployment rising more sharply than anticipated as the recession worsens, the President will be under increased pressure to consider major tax cuts in order to help stimulate the economy.

Over the past 12 months, unemployment has increased by more than two million. The nation's unemployment rate averaged 5.6 per cent in 1974. The jobless rate in 1973 averaged 4.9 per cent.

The Labor Department said job losses last month affected both white-and blue-collar workers and virtually every major worker category.

Two other indications of the economic sag came Thursday when the Commerce Department reported that new orders for factories declined 2 per cent in November and new construction slumped 2.7 per cent that month.

The December unemployment figures, which reflect massive layoffs in automobile-related industries as well as those resulting from the nationwide coal strike, were based on data gathered before the middle of the month. Layoffs have continued to spread since then and will push the jobless rate for January still higher.

This trend was indicated Thursday in the Labor Department's weekly report on unemployment insurance claims. The report said 677,800 persons applied for jobless benefits during the week ended Dec. 21, an increase of 40,100 over the previous week.

Administration economists predict unemployment will continue rising until it reaches about 7.5 per cent by midyear, but some private economists forecast a rate of 8 per cent by summer, a level that has not been approached in the last 25 years.

In other economic developments:

—AFL-CIO President George Meany is convening a rare meeting of the presidents of all 110 unions in the labor federation to develop a program "designed to stabilize the economy and put American back to work."

—The nation's auto makers reported that car production in 1974 was the lowest for a nonstrike year since 1962. The four major manufacturers said production in 1974 totalled 7,340,373 units, down 24 per cent from the 1973 record of 9,660,819.

—Chrysler Corp. said it is cutting back production in the Detroit and St. Louis areas beginning Monday. The company's St. Louis car assembly plant will be shut down, putting 2,000 employes out of work indefinitely. Another 3,600 St. Louis-area Chrysler workers will be laid off with the shutdown of the Missouri truck plant. Chrysler said 5,200 workers at its truck plant in Warren, Mich., will be out of work with an extension of a shutdown there.

—Ford Motor Co. is laying off 1,100 workers indefinitely at two trim plants.

—The nation's largest retailers reported December sales gains were better than anticipated but not strong enough to erase the cloud still hanging over Christmas profits.

—The labor contract between the 5,300-member Sheet Metal Workers Union and U.S. railroads expired, raising the possibility of a strike.

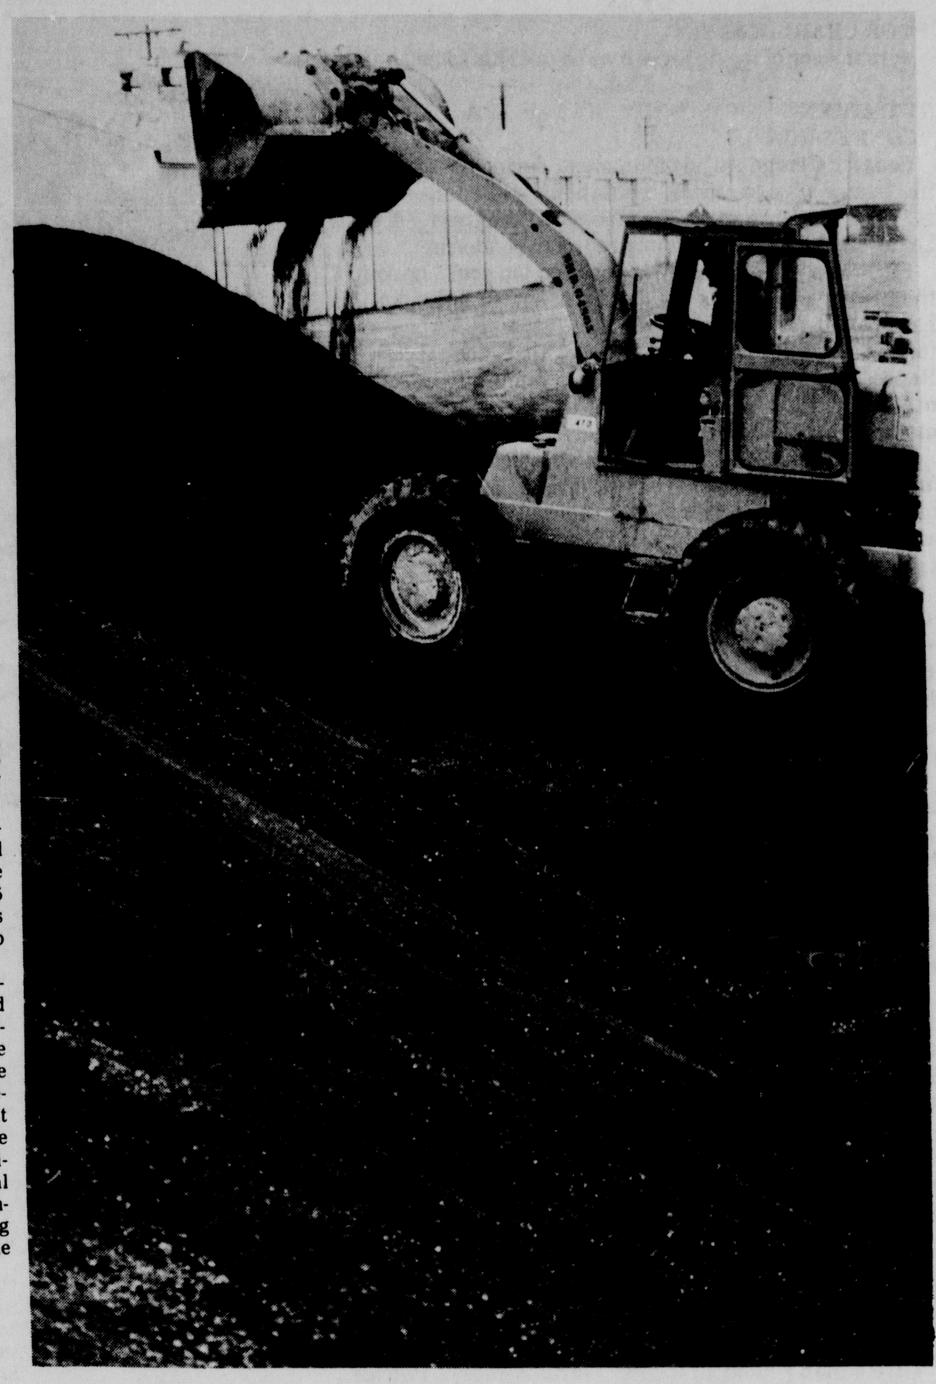
—The stock market started the New Year with a 15.80 jump in the Dow Jones industrial average. The London stock market slumped to a 20-year low.

—Gold prices slumped on both the U.S. ad European markets for the second consecutive day. Brokers say gold prices soared recently in anticipation of American buying that became legal earlier this week. But the American gold rush has thus far not materialized.

—President Ford's economic advisers have reached nearly unanimous agreement on the need for a tax cut, the New York Times said today. The newspaper said administration officials report that the advisers are still debating the size of the tax cut and that Ford has yet to reach a decision on the proposal. One high official said there is a $10 billion to $20 billion difference on the size of the cut, the newspaper said.

—The Social Security contribution base should be raised from $14,100 to $24,000 and the tax from 5.85 per cent to 5.95 per cent from both employes and employers, a study group says.

A spokesman for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Thursday the recommendation was made by the subcommittee on finance of the Advisory Council on Social Security, a panel of prominent private citizens chosen by the HEW secretary to study the financial condition of the Social Security system. The full council has not finished formulating its final recommendations, the spokesman said.



Cinders readied for highway use

Earl Marcum, team leader on a Missouri State Highway Department District 10 maintenance crew, moves some of the stockpile of cinders at the department's equipment sheds on East Malone Avenue. The cinders are ready for use when the first ice glaze or snowfall hits the Sikeston area this winter. The crews will service all main highways through Sikeston and the District 10 area. Historical museum site part of town's past

By NADINE TOWNSEND

NEW MADRID — The site and building for the planned historical museum at the south end of Main Street have been a part of this river town's business scene since 1886.

The building is now under renovation by the Chamber of Commerce and Community Betterment Committee that initiated the project for establishing a museum.

Research into the past ownership of the property reveals that Myers and Jackson Butcher Shop was the first business venture established in a wooden building that was constructed on the site in 1897.

The original abstract shows that A. A. LaForge, one of the town's prominent pioneer landowners, bought the 50-foot lot fronting Main Street from John E. Powell for $150 on March 4, 1886.

A partition suit by the LaForge heirs resulted in the property being sold in 1895 at public auction to Lizzie Digges and Mamie Shead who made the highest bid of $852.50.

The first wooden structure on the site was then built by Tom Harry Digges for the butcher shop.

A news story in the Weekly Record, dated June 18, 1904, reported the building was among 10 businesses destroyed by a fire that had swept through that part of the town.

The butcher shop's loss was estimated at $600 in lard, meat and refrigerator and horse power mills.

A widow woman, identified only as Mrs. Nelson, who operated a restaurant and kept a small grocery stock in a south room of the building reported she was only able to save a few pieces of furniture and bedding and lost about $200 worth of goroceries.

W. L. Digges acquired ownership of the property in 1907 and built the brick building that is now on the site for the Kendell Saloon.

During the days of the saloon business in this busy river port and county seat town, there was a sign on the Main Street side of the building that stated "Last Chance" to those who might be leaving the town by river. On the side facing the river, for its many customers embarking from packet boats that stopped at New Madrid, the sign declared "First Chance".

At this time the town was without protection from the Mississippi River since the big levee wasn't constructed until 1916.

Some of the happenings at the saloon made interesting stories around the town. One of the stories that has been passed along through the years was that a man on horseback rode through the front door of the saloon, fired five gunshots into his enemy then turned his steed around and rode out.

Friends of the wounded man saved his life, however, by placing him in a buggy that didn't have a horse hitched to it which they quickly pulled to a doctor's office about a block away.

The thriving business was forced to close after New Madrid County was voted "dry". The Weekly Record, published April 6, 1912, reported 3,645 votes were cast in the election, with 1,958 votes favoring the temperance issue and 1,687 voters opposed.

In 1925, the building was sold to L. A. Lewis for $2,000 by Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Digges. Groves Ford Agency of Cape Girardeau established a dealership in the building for a period of time.

In 1941, H. H. Townsend Sr. purchased the building from the L. A. Lewis heirs, and in 1948,, the building was sold to R. C. Howerton, C. B. Howerton and Van Hawkins. These men had an automobile agency in the building for a period of one year, during which time not one car was sold.

The next owner, Scotty Robinson, operated a fish market for several years, and later a garage was established by his son , Dave Robinson, who bought the buildinng.

In June 1974, the Chamber of Commerce purchased the property and started the renovation for a historical museum for the town.

During the succeeding months volunteers have completely gutted the inside of the building and cleared the grounds.

All new plumbing and sewer lines have been installed, some brick work done and new wiring has been installed as well as a new concrete floor.

The building committee has met on a regular basis to determine the work to be done as funds became available.

Financing of the renovation has been handled through donations and fund-raising events sponsored by the committee, including two public dances in the building, a children's day show, beef raffle and a Christmas memory tree.

A total of $2,359.54, including $510 for new brick, has been spent for materials in addition to the concrete that was donated.

Upon completion of some outside bricking, work will be started on finishing the interior.

Police said $4.70 was taken from a leukemia donation canister, $21 in change from a box and $2 in stamp money.

Police said the burglars entered through a back door on the east side. Filing cabinets were pried open but nothing was taken.

Burglars took an undetermined amount of money and credit cards from Proffer's Bi-Rite, 1501 E. Malone Ave., sometime overnight.

Police said the burglars took the drawers out of the cash register and emptied them. Entry was gained by breaking out a window pane in the back door.

Someone took an undetermined amount of money from a cigarette vending machine juke box and coin-operated bowling game at the Wagon Wheel tavern, 849 W. Malone Ave., on Wednesday. Also taken was an undetermined amount of beer.

Receiving minor injuries were Overmeier and five passengers in his car, Diana Overmeier, 28, Christy Overmeier, 3, and Robert Overmeier, 1, of Tamaroa, and Seymour Greenburge, 55, and Bonnie Greenburge, 31, of Forest Park, Ill. All of the injured victims were taken to Veterans

THE AIKEN "CONFESSION"

Senator George Aiken of Vermont, during the 34 years of his tenure, has earned a reputation for "telling it like it is." His recent farewell address to Congress contains some nuggets of wisdom that are worth pondering.

First, if confession truly is good for the soul, the soul of the 82-year-old dean of the Senate is now in fine shape. "I have voted for measures which I felt were wrong, conforting myself with the excuse that the House of Representatives, the conference committee or, if necessary, the chief occupant of the White House would make the proper corrections," said Aiken.

"... I have voted for measures with which I did not agree for the purpose of preventing the approval of other measures which I felt would be worse," he continues. "I have approved the expansion of committee staffs when I knew that an increase was unnecessary and costly."

Although those sentiments — which no doubt could be repeated by the large majority of Members of Congress — received the most attention in the press, the Vermont Republican proceeded to suggest some changes in the way the government operates. While not necessarily agreeing with them all, we believe they are worthy of open debate at a minimum.

"...I believe the time has come when we should stop talking about raising the salaries of our highest paid Government officials," he said. "If the President wants the public to listen and cooperate (with anti-inflation measures), he will set an example by recommending a reasonable reduction in his own salary and the salaries of other top officials in Government, including the judiciary, the Cabinet, and the Members of Congress."

The Senator also suggested constitutional amendments limiting the President to a single six-year term and prohibiting Members of Congress from becoming candidates for President or Vice President until they have been out of the legislature for at least two years.

Senator Aiken ended with this bit of wisdom, with which we unequivocally agree: "The United States will survive the current period, but the price we will have to pay is up to us."

THE END OF AN ERA

An era will end in the Mississippi County Courthouse this week with the retirement of Ellis W. Howlett as Circuit Clerk and ex-officio Recorder of Deeds after 40 years of service.

Few people in the general public have much contact with these offices, but those who do,including newspaper reporters, recognize quality when they see it.

Ellis Howlett has been a first-rate public servant.

Mr. Howlett's court records and indexes are things of beauty to those who can see beauty in a job well done. In a business here a sloppy job of record keeping can mean hours of searching for a lawyer or abstractor, Mr. Howlett has kept his records current and accurate.

With his experience, he has saved face for many an attorney by noticing errors both minor and major in documents and sending them back for correction before they can cause any problems.

We have always observed him to be courteous in dealing with the public.

An honest man, his integrity in conducting the affairs of his office, which includes the handling of large sums of money at times, has never been questioned.

For reporters, he has never been questioned.

For reporters, he has always been willing to take the time to explain the judge's indecipherable scrawl on the docket sheets, or to explain the meaning of some Latin term found in a document, or simply to give a quick summary of the results of a trial when a deadline must be met andthere is not time for the reporter to get to the Courthouse.

Circuit Judge Marshall Craig says it most simply when he describes Mr. Howlett as "The best Circuit Clerk in the State."

Judge Craig may not know every clerk in the state, so perhaps his statement is not accurate. But those of us who have had weekly or daily contact with Ellis for a period of many years know what the Judge was trying to convey — that here is a man who has served the people well, with integrity, honesty and efficiency. In training, temperament and talent Mr. Howlett was suited to his job, and he has done that job as well as anyone could ever expect to do it.

We will miss him in his office, and wish him the best of everything in his retirement.

WURF COMMMANDOS HIJACK CONGRESS

During recent infighting between Democratic Party "moderates" and "reformers" over 94th Congress committee assignments, California Rep. Phillip Burton, chairman of the Democratic caucus, teamed up with union lobbyists to put the muscle on House majority leader Tip O'Neill.

According to the Washington Post, Burton and an unidentified AFL-CIO strongarm marched into O'Neill during the tug-of-war and suggested to the majority leader that he'd better silence the sore-loser incumbents who were fighting to retain power.

Let them know, Burton and his enforcer told O'Neill, that anyone who gets in the way of their committee juggling plans stands to get "creamed."

'O'Neill understood.

Except for Post writer Mary Russell, almost no one noticed what was happening, however.

For the most part, political observers contented themselves with dissecting the growing rift between George Meany and Democratic Party chairman Robert Strauss, and completely ignored the fact that simultaneously Congressman Burton and the "new" Big Laborites of public sector union boss Jerry Wurf were busily hijacking the new Congress.

Even now, most of the people around Washington who consider themselves political sophisticates are still operating under the naive assumption that the Meany-Strauss spat means it's all over between the Democratic Party and its chief benefactor — Big Labor.

This just isn't so. In fact, union radicals like Wurf probably enjoy more power today than Meany ever dreamed of.

In passing, it's interesting to note that the few "sophisticates" who do understand what's taken place are remaining adamantly silent — a posture we can't believe they would hold if Burton, or somebody else, had teamed up with ITT lobbyists, or the "milk lobby," or the Man from Glad.

More to the point, of course, is the fact that union president Wurf and other seasoned commandos of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal employees union have been after Congress for a long time to pass federal legislation granting them new coercive powers designed to destroy the rights and freedoms of public employees.

In the past they've trumped up strikes and disruptions to pressure Congress and intimidate the public. But this hasn't worked. So now they're going about it differently.

They've hi-jacked the Congress They've placed their well-trained puppets in the high command. And come January, they'll be ready for action.

We still can't help but wonder what the public and daily press would be saying if the highway lobby ... or NAM ... or the cattle interests were calling the shots instead of Jerry Wurf. We can't believe they'd be silent. Yet silent they are.

It will be interesting to see how silent they remain when Congress appears ready to cave into Wurf's demands for legislation which would compel each of America's 14.5 million government workers to pay money to public sector union officials in order to keep their jobs. It will be interesting to see if America is ready to pay ransom.

ABUSE OF FOOD STAMPS

An investigation by the Jefferson City News Tribune reveals that many foreign students in the United States are receiving welfare food stamps.

This is true despite the fact that before they can enter this country foreign students must prove that they have sufficient funds to support themselves. In Cole County welfare officials say about 50 foreign students are receiving food stamps at U.S. taxpayer expense.

It is one more example of the misuse and continued growth of the welfare food stamp program administered by the U.S. Agricultural Department. Amazing as it sounds government welfare bureaucrats are trying to brainwash the public into believing that because the Agriculture Department is involved the dole financed by taxpayers really isn't welfare.

Brooks R. Hierstein of Kansas City, district director of the federal immigration and naturalization service, says the federal government has determined that foreign students can receive food stamps and not violate their pledge of self-sufficiency.

The Wall Street Journal reported recently that a man earning $15,000 a year as a government bus mechanic was drawing food stamps. He discovered that he could qualify because of a host of allowable deductions, including taxes, medical bills, parochial school tuition and utility bills, lowered his gross income from $1,300 a month to $700 a month for food stamp calculation purposes.

A junior high school teacher earning an annual salary of $9,600 a year went into a welfare office on a whim and found that his taxes and housing costs reduced his net monthly income for food stamp purposes to about $290. That entitled him to receive $118 of food stamps for $76, or $42 a month in free welfare food. The taxpayers who pay this teacher's $9,600 a year salary also must shell out an extra $504 annually in free welfare food. The teacher is married and has only one child. His experience has encouraged three of his teacher friends to apply for welfare food stamp doles.

The food stamp program is expected to cost the federal government almost twice as much next year. Officials estimates say that $2.7 billion figure for fiscal 1974 will go to $4.2 billion in 1975.

Social action groups estimate that 15 million persons are now receiving food stamps and another 25 million might be eligible for the taxpayer dole if they applied.

Unless Congress makes some changes in the law, one in every four Americans may be eligible for welfare food stamps in 1976.

It is time for citizens of Missouri and this nation to take a serious look at the many costly Washington nurtured welfare programs that have sprouted and grown like weeds.

In addition to foreign students, welfare food stamps have been given to able bodied person who have gone on strike for more wages. The AFL-CIO has been determined to use both unemployment insurance financed by businessmen and the nation's walfare program to allow strikers to receive money from government sources.

Members of the United Auto Workers Union collected $30 million in welfare benefits during their 1970 strike against General Motors.

Missourians should open their eyes and take a careful look at what is going on in Washington. The prospect of one person in four going through the grocery checkout counter next year at the expense of the other three in line is grim indeed.

Mid-Missouri state legislators — including Reps. Carrol McCubbin, R-Eldon; Harold Dickson, R-California; and William E (Bill) Blackwell, D-Hermann — have spoken out against the present practice of handing out food stamps to foreign students.

It is time for legislation on the state and federal levels to be approved that would put an end to the gross misuse of the food stamp program. (Jefferson City News Tribune)

INSPIRATION NEEDED IN ORDER TO WIN

President Ford made it clear right from the start that he was a Ford, not a Lincoln. Neither, it now appears, is he a Roosevelt.

Among other criticisms, the President's strategy for a war against inflation has been unfavorably compared with the bold initiatives introduced by FDR back in the dark days of the Great Depression.

Those who make this comparison seem to forget, however, that invaluable as was Roosevelt's leadership for the morale of the nation and as worthwhile his many programs in alleviating the worst aspects of the Depression, nothing he proposed and nothing Congress disposed had any real effect on the fundamental malaise of the economy.

In fact, after four years of the New Deal, the economy went into another tailspin that was in some ways worse than that of 1929-32. It wasn't until the middle of World War II that the last vestiges of the Depression were erased.

Well, one thing this country does not need is another shooting war, although it could be wished that inflation were as clearly identifiable an enemy as the one Americans were up against in the 1940s. It is not. Inflation is an amorphous, hydra-headed disease, the cure for which even the best economic minds cannot agree on.

Then, too, Roosevelt had only a depression to worry about. If nobody had much money, at least prices were in the basement along with them. Mr. Ford faces not only a fledgling depression but one that is combined with a spiraling cost of living that is close to being out of control.

Still, one thing Americans definitely could use right now is a little inspiration-to be given hope, to be convinced that concrete steps are being taken to attack the nation's complex economic problems.

It is in failing to do this that Mr. Ford's "Whip Inflation Now" program may most be found wanting. The slogan itself lacks rallying power-again possibly because inflation is only one face of the enemy.

What the President seems to have come up with is a list of cautious steps designed to mean the least discomfort for the greatest number of people. As one observer commented, he has bitten the bullet-and it has a marshmallow center.

There are also contradictions. On the one hand, to fight recession, the President wants to increase the business investment tax write-off while on the other hand, to fight inflation, the government maintains a tight money policy that has made loans hard to come by in the first place. He wants to pump a few billion into the hard-hit housing industry where again, it is high interest rates and scarce mortgage money that has dashed so many dreams.

Nevertheless, no one, including the nation's most prestigious economists, has offered any better list of solutions It may very well be that the President's greatest strength lies in the fact that he is a Ford and not a Lincoln, not a flashy limousine but a dependable, trustworthy flivver that will eventually get us where we want to go.

He deserves all the support we can give him. Is there any other choice..

SHOWDOWN AT THE TV CORRAL

Like the farmers and ranchers of the Old West who battled over the question of who should use what land for what purpose, the free TV forces and pay TV forces are at it again.

The former, of course, is the television the vast majority of people know-commercially sponsored, freely available to anyone with a functioning set.

The latter is the pay cable television industry, which has developed out of the old community antenna television (CATV) systems whose original purpose was to pipe in clear signals to remote rural areas or to cities where skyscrapers interfered with reception.

Pay cablecasting should be distinguished from experimental subscription TV, where a scrambled signal is sent over the air, not through a cable.

Both sides have brought out their public relations guns in anticipation of hearings scheduled by the Federal Communications Commission for Oct. 23-25 at which pay TV is expected to make a strong pitch for some relaxation of the rules governing it.

"Free television," says a special committee on pay television of the National Association of Broadcasters, "is at the crossroads in its struggle to remain the nation's primary communications and entertainment medium."

The specter the NAB raises is that of "siphoning"- the fear that pay TV would eventually draw off programs now seen for free over commercial TV. The Super Bowl, for instance, could go the way of heavyweight boxing matches.

Pay TV, which calls itself "the electronic box office," of course has its own arguments.

One thing the cable operators are fretting under is the FCC's rule prohibiting them from showing any movie between two and 10 years old. The industry wants the lower limit raised to about for years, since the average age of a "first-run" movie on free TV is 53 months.

People, says the National Cable Television Assn., should have the choice: To pay to see a movie right away, or wait to see it for free later.

As for sports, pay cable operators want the right to carry any sports contest not regularly shown on over-the-air TV. For instance, if 50 out of 81 "away" baseball games are broadcast, pay cable would have the right to carry the other 31 games.

The cablecasters have an advocate in the form of a report made to the FCC in November, 1972, by the U.S. Justice Department.

Department investigators found "no evidence that a significant amount of 'siphoning' has occurred or will occur." For example, it is unlikely that many viewers would pay to see a standard half-hour situation comedy if programs of comparable quality are available on commercial television.

The report also noted that concern for protecting free broadcasting against siphoning "appears to rest on the assumption that program matter is fixed in amount." The large-scale underemployment of America's actors, writers and directors indicates the capacity exists to meet an increased demand for programming.

In other words, the situation is different from that of the ranchers and farmers of yore, who contested over a finite amount of land.

No one wants to see the destruction of commercial television. For all its undoubted faults, it brings pleasure, entertainment and information to tens of millions.

Thus the FCC should make haste, not slowly but temperately. If a regulation is not needed to protect free TV but stifles innovative programming by pay TV, it should be abolished, or at least suspended.

The farmers and the ranchers eventually learned to get along together. So can pay TV and free TV.

A small voice over the telephone said, "Mother, come and get me. The movie's out."

Mentally checking her own kids' whereabouts, she told the wee caller that she wasn't his mother.

His response: "You have to be my mother, because this is the last dime I have."

Why, things are happening so fast that some school kids are having to take remedial current events.

HISTORICAL NOTE

It has been more than 50 years since World War I and the disastrous inflation that swept Germany after that conflict. However, a brief historical note in The Winthrop, Minnesota, News is a reminder of what inflation did on that occasion. In the words of The News, "We have read of postwar years that is WWI in Germany. We were reminded of this when a few pieces of currency from that time came into our possession. One was a million mark note. If it were valid now, with the current value of the mark now between 25 and 30 cents this note would represent $250,000 to $300,000. It is worthless, except as a curio." The Winthrowp News item was written before the dollar was devalued in late December, 1971.

Everyone agrees that inflation is bad, but few realize just how bad it can be. It can overwhelm the smartest of men and the best laid plans of government. Its only real preventive -- or cure-- is a balance between spending and taxation.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Pentagon Deceit in '58 Nearly Pushed U.S. into a Nuclear War

WASHINGTON — The top secret documents stoken a few weeks ago from Daniel Ellsberg contain startling evidence that the Pentagon in 1958 tried to trick President Eisenhower into using nuclear weapons against Communist China.

The military brass plotted, according to the documents, to testtheir new tactical nuclear weapons in combat. The opportunity came in 1958 during a crisis over two tiny, Nationalist-held islands, Quemoy and Matsu, which the Communists threatened to seize.

The generals deliberately deceived the White House, which was misled, therefore, into tentatively approving the use of nuclear weapons to defend the islands. In other words, the United States was ready to fight a nuclear war 16 years ago over two insignificant islands, which today draw no more than a shrug from our policy-makers.

The story of the Pentagon's deception, of course, has been swept under the top secret stamp. But in 1967, the shocking details were summarized in a secret Rand study by Morton Halpern, who later was to become a top White House security adviser.

While Daniel Ellsberg was with Rand, he had official access to the Halpern report and later made a copy of it in hopes he could someday testify about it to Congress. Halpern, who had classified the two-inch thick document in the first place, has now sought unsuccessfully to declassify it, but had no idea Ellsberg had a copy.

A few weeks ago, sneak thieves broke into Ellsberg's home and hauled off some valuables, including his private papers. Among them was a secret photo copy. Police recovered the papers, which the Justice Department then sought to obtain.But Ellsberg successfully arranged for Congress to get custody.

The explosive Rand report gives a chilling account of the Quemoy-Matsu crisis. Here are the highlights:

The two offshore islands came under intensive Communist artillery attack in 1958. The United States, which was sworn to help Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek defend the islands, assumed the Communists were softening them up for an imminent invasion.

This led to some urgent contingency planning in the Pentagon and the White House. The military brass, according to the report, wanted to use tactical nuclear weapons to destroy China's underground munitions dumps and gun emplacements.

The Pentagon, therefore, falsely informed the White House that the available Air Force planes had no bomb racks that could accommodate high-explosive conventional bombs powerful enough to knock out the underground installations. It would take "nukes," the Pentagon insisted, to do the job.

A copy of this false Pentagon message reached a top commander in the Pacific, who was also eager to test tactical nuclear weapons against the Chinese mainland but who was too honest to mislead the White House.

By secret "back channel" cable, privy only to the top brass, he informed them that they were wrong about the bomb racks. There were adequate racks, he reminded the Pentagon, to handle the most powerful conventional bombs.

The Pentagon fired back a hot order to the honests commander to "shut up," according to the Rand report, and the deception of the White Houe continued.

Impressed by this and other false information from the Pentagon,President Eisenhower, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and their advisers went ahead with tentative plans to use nuclear weapons against Communist China.

Wisely, Eisenhower kept in his own hands the final decision when the nuclear button was to be pushed. Meanwhile, the Quemoy-Matsu crisis happily simmered down.

While the Pentagon maneuvered the nation to the brink of nuclear war, the American people were kept in blissful ignorance of the danger. One of the most compelling comments on this secrecy was made by Christian Herter, the thoughtful, decent man who played a subordinate role in the 1958 crisis before succeeding Dulles as secretary of state the following year.

Those who lived through the Quemoy-Matsu developments, he once recounted, were acutely aware that they were in the midst of America's first nuclear crisis since the decision to bomb Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Yet to this day, the American people haven't been told how close they came to nuclear war.

Footnote: The deception described in the Rand report has been all too typical of the military brass. They continue to use "back channel" communications to exchange messages that they don't want their civilian superiors to see.

In the 1950s, the admirals ordered the Marine receptionist in Navby Secretary Francis Matthews' office to slip them a complete list of people who called upon the secretary and the exact number of minutes they remained.

More recently, the Joint Chiefs used the same system to spy on Henry Kissinger. A Navy yeoman actually rifled through burn bags and pilfered papers from Kissinger's briefcase forthe brass.

Unfortunately, the investigation of this incident was entrusted to Senate Armed Services Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., an apologist for the Pentagon, who ignored evidence implicating Adm. Thomas H. Moorer and let the former Joint Chiefs chairman off the hook.

According to Public Utilities Fortnightly magazine, "Oil from such sources as coal, tar sands, and shale oil may be the fuel of the future. And the future may be closer than we think. In a speech ... (Mr.) Maurice F. Granville, chairman of Texaco, Inc., stated that rising costs of conventional oil operations are encouraging the industry to investigate the manufacture of synthetic fuels. Energy requirements during the next twenty years (or so) are expected to reach five times the 1960 level, and the oil industry is already moving into 'exploratory areas that would have been either inaccessible or prohibitively expensive just a few years ago.'"

THE END OF AN ERA

An era will end in the Mississippi County Courthouse this week with the retirement of Ellis W. Howlett as Circuit Clerk and ex-officio Recorder of Deeds after 40 years of service.

Few people in the general public have much contact with these offices, but those who do,including newspaper reporters, recognize quality when they see it.

Ellis Howlett has been a first-rate public servant.

Mr. Howlett's court records and indexes are things of beauty to those who can see beauty in a job well done. In a business here a sloppy job of record keeping can mean hours of searching for a lawyer or abstractor, Mr. Howlett has kept his records current and accurate.

With his experience, he has saved face for many an attorney by noticing errors both minor and major in documents and sending them back for correction before they can cause any problems.

We have always observed him to be courteous in dealing with the public.

An honest man, his integrity in conducting the affairs of his office, which includes the handling of large sums of money at times, has never been questioned.

For reporters, he has never been questioned.

For reporters, he has always been willing to take the time to explain the judge's indecipherable scrawl on the docket sheets, or to explain the meaning of some Latin term found in a document, or simply to give a quick summary of the results of a trial when a deadline must be met andthere is not time for the reporter to get to the Courthouse.

Circuit Judge Marshall Craig says it most simply when he describes Mr. Howlett as "The best Circuit Clerk in the State."

Judge Craig may not know every clerk in the state, so perhaps his statement is not accurate. But those of us who have had weekly or daily contact with Ellis for a period of many years know what the Judge was trying to convey — that here is a man who has served the people well, with integrity, honesty and efficiency. In training, temperament and talent Mr. Howlett was suited to his job, and he has done that job as well as anyone could ever expect to do it.

We will miss him in his office, and wish him the best of everything in his retirement.

WURF COMMMANDOS HIJACK CONGRESS

During recent infighting between Democratic Party "moderates" and "reformers" over 94th Congress committee assignments, California Rep. Phillip Burton, chairman of the Democratic caucus, teamed up with union lobbyists to put the muscle on House majority leader Tip O'Neill.

According to the Washington Post, Burton and an unidentified AFL-CIO strongarm marched into O'Neill during the tug-of-war and suggested to the majority leader that he'd better silence the sore-loser incumbents who were fighting to retain power.

Let them know, Burton and his enforcer told O'Neill, that anyone who gets in the way of their committee juggling plans stands to get "creamed."

'O'Neill understood.

Except for Post writer Mary Russell, almost no one noticed what was happening, however.

For the most part, political observers contented themselves with dissecting the growing rift between George Meany and Democratic Party chairman Robert Strauss, and completely ignored the fact that simultaneously Congressman Burton and the "new" Big Laborites of public sector union boss Jerry Wurf were busily hijacking the new Congress.

Even now, most of the people around Washington who consider themselves political sophisticates are still operating under the naive assumption that the Meany-Strauss spat means it's all over between the Democratic Party and its chief benefactor — Big Labor.

This just isn't so. In fact, union radicals like Wurf probably enjoy more power today than Meany ever dreamed of.

In passing, it's interesting to note that the few "sophisticates" who do understand what's taken place are remaining adamantly silent — a posture we can't believe they would hold if Burton, or somebody else, had teamed up with ITT lobbyists, or the "milk lobby," or the Man from Glad.

More to the point, of course, is the fact that union president Wurf and other seasoned commandos of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal employees union have been after Congress for a long time to pass federal legislation granting them new coercive powers designed to destroy the rights and freedoms of public employees.

In the past they've trumped up strikes and disruptions to pressure Congress and intimidate the public. But this hasn't worked. So now they're going about it differently.

They've hi-jacked the Congress They've placed their well-trained puppets in the high command. And come January, they'll be ready for action.

We still can't help but wonder what the public and daily press would be saying if the highway lobby ... or NAM ... or the cattle interests were calling the shots instead of Jerry Wurf. We can't believe they'd be silent. Yet silent they are.

It will be interesting to see how silent they remain when Congress appears ready to cave into Wurf's demands for legislation which would compel each of America's 14.5 million government workers to pay money to public sector union officials in order to keep their jobs. It will be interesting to see if America is ready to pay ransom.

ABUSE OF FOOD STAMPS

An investigation by the Jefferson City News Tribune reveals that many foreign students in the United States are receiving welfare food stamps.

This is true despite the fact that before they can enter this country foreign students must prove that they have sufficient funds to support themselves. In Cole County welfare officials say about 50 foreign students are receiving food stamps at U.S. taxpayer expense.

It is one more example of the misuse and continued growth of the welfare food stamp program administered by the U.S. Agricultural Department. Amazing as it sounds government welfare bureaucrats are trying to brainwash the public into believing that because the Agriculture Department is involved the dole financed by taxpayers really isn't welfare.

Brooks R. Hierstein of Kansas City, district director of the federal immigration and naturalization service, says the federal government has determined that foreign students can receive food stamps and not violate their pledge of self-sufficiency.

The Wall Street Journal reported recently that a man earning $15,000 a year as a government bus mechanic was drawing food stamps. He discovered that he could qualify because of a host of allowable deductions, including taxes, medical bills, parochial school tuition and utility bills, lowered his gross income from $1,300 a month to $700 a month for food stamp calculation purposes.

A junior high school teacher earning an annual salary of $9,600 a year went into a welfare office on a whim and found that his taxes and housing costs reduced his net monthly income for food stamp purposes to about $290. That entitled him to receive $118 of food stamps for $76, or $42 a month in free welfare food. The taxpayers who pay this teacher's $9,600 a year salary also must shell out an extra $504 annually in free welfare food. The teacher is married and has only one child. His experience has encouraged three of his teacher friends to apply for welfare food stamp doles.

The food stamp program is expected to cost the federal government almost twice as much next year. Officials estimates say that $2.7 billion figure for fiscal 1974 will go to $4.2 billion in 1975.

Social action groups estimate that 15 million persons are now receiving food stamps and another 25 million might be eligible for the taxpayer dole if they applied.

Unless Congress makes some changes in the law, one in every four Americans may be eligible for welfare food stamps in 1976.

It is time for citizens of Missouri and this nation to take a serious look at the many costly Washington nurtured welfare programs that have sprouted and grown like weeds.

In addition to foreign students, welfare food stamps have been given to able bodied person who have gone on strike for more wages. The AFL-CIO has been determined to use both unemployment insurance financed by businessmen and the nation's walfare program to allow strikers to receive money from government sources.

Members of the United Auto Workers Union collected $30 million in welfare benefits during their 1970 strike against General Motors.

Missourians should open their eyes and take a careful look at what is going on in Washington. The prospect of one person in four going through the grocery checkout counter next year at the expense of the other three in line is grim indeed.

Mid-Missouri state legislators — including Reps. Carrol McCubbin, R-Eldon; Harold Dickson, R-California; and William E (Bill) Blackwell, D-Hermann — have spoken out against the present practice of handing out food stamps to foreign students.

It is time for legislation on the state and federal levels to be approved that would put an end to the gross misuse of the food stamp program. (Jefferson City News Tribune)

INSPIRATION NEEDED IN ORDER TO WIN

President Ford made it clear right from the start that he was a Ford, not a Lincoln. Neither, it now appears, is he a Roosevelt.

Among other criticisms, the President's strategy for a war against inflation has been unfavorably compared with the bold initiatives introduced by FDR back in the dark days of the Great Depression.

Those who make this comparison seem to forget, however, that invaluable as was Roosevelt's leadership for the morale of the nation and as worthwhile his many programs in alleviating the worst aspects of the Depression, nothing he proposed and nothing Congress disposed had any real effect on the fundamental malaise of the economy.

In fact, after four years of the New Deal, the economy went into another tailspin that was in some ways worse than that of 1929-32. It wasn't until the middle of World War II that the last vestiges of the Depression were erased.

Well, one thing this country does not need is another shooting war, although it could be wished that inflation were as clearly identifiable an enemy as the one Americans were up against in the 1940s. It is not. Inflation is an amorphous, hydra-headed disease, the cure for which even the best economic minds cannot agree on.

Then, too, Roosevelt had only a depression to worry about. If nobody had much money, at least prices were in the basement along with them. Mr. Ford faces not only a fledgling depression but one that is combined with a spiraling cost of living that is close to being out of control.

Still, one thing Americans definitely could use right now is a little inspiration-to be given hope, to be convinced that concrete steps are being taken to attack the nation's complex economic problems.

It is in failing to do this that Mr. Ford's "Whip Inflation Now" program may most be found wanting. The slogan itself lacks rallying power-again possibly because inflation is only one face of the enemy.

What the President seems to have come up with is a list of cautious steps designed to mean the least discomfort for the greatest number of people. As one observer commented, he has bitten the bullet-and it has a marshmallow center.

There are also contradictions. On the one hand, to fight recession, the President wants to increase the business investment tax write-off while on the other hand, to fight inflation, the government maintains a tight money policy that has made loans hard to come by in the first place. He wants to pump a few billion into the hard-hit housing industry where again, it is high interest rates and scarce mortgage money that has dashed so many dreams.

Nevertheless, no one, including the nation's most prestigious economists, has offered any better list of solutions It may very well be that the President's greatest strength lies in the fact that he is a Ford and not a Lincoln, not a flashy limousine but a dependable, trustworthy flivver that will eventually get us where we want to go.

He deserves all the support we can give him. Is there any other choice..

SHOWDOWN AT THE TV CORRAL

Like the farmers and ranchers of the Old West who battled over the question of who should use what land for what purpose, the free TV forces and pay TV forces are at it again.

The former, of course, is the television the vast majority of people know-commercially sponsored, freely available to anyone with a functioning set.

The latter is the pay cable television industry, which has developed out of the old community antenna television (CATV) systems whose original purpose was to pipe in clear signals to remote rural areas or to cities where skyscrapers interfered with reception.

Pay cablecasting should be distinguished from experimental subscription TV, where a scrambled signal is sent over the air, not through a cable.

Both sides have brought out their public relations guns in anticipation of hearings scheduled by the Federal Communications Commission for Oct. 23-25 at which pay TV is expected to make a strong pitch for some relaxation of the rules governing it.

"Free television," says a special committee on pay television of the National Association of Broadcasters, "is at the crossroads in its struggle to remain the nation's primary communications and entertainment medium."

The specter the NAB raises is that of "siphoning"- the fear that pay TV would eventually draw off programs now seen for free over commercial TV. The Super Bowl, for instance, could go the way of heavyweight boxing matches.

Pay TV, which calls itself "the electronic box office," of course has its own arguments.

One thing the cable operators are fretting under is the FCC's rule prohibiting them from showing any movie between two and 10 years old. The industry wants the lower limit raised to about for years, since the average age of a "first-run" movie on free TV is 53 months.

People, says the National Cable Television Assn., should have the choice: To pay to see a movie right away, or wait to see it for free later.

As for sports, pay cable operators want the right to carry any sports contest not regularly shown on over-the-air TV. For instance, if 50 out of 81 "away" baseball games are broadcast, pay cable would have the right to carry the other 31 games.

The cablecasters have an advocate in the form of a report made to the FCC in November, 1972, by the U.S. Justice Department.

Department investigators found "no evidence that a significant amount of 'siphoning' has occurred or will occur." For example, it is unlikely that many viewers would pay to see a standard half-hour situation comedy if programs of comparable quality are available on commercial television.

The report also noted that concern for protecting free broadcasting against siphoning "appears to rest on the assumption that program matter is fixed in amount." The large-scale underemployment of America's actors, writers and directors indicates the capacity exists to meet an increased demand for programming.

In other words, the situation is different from that of the ranchers and farmers of yore, who contested over a finite amount of land.

No one wants to see the destruction of commercial television. For all its undoubted faults, it brings pleasure, entertainment and information to tens of millions.

Thus the FCC should make haste, not slowly but temperately. If a regulation is not needed to protect free TV but stifles innovative programming by pay TV, it should be abolished, or at least suspended.

The farmers and the ranchers eventually learned to get along together. So can pay TV and free TV.

A small voice over the telephone said, "Mother, come and get me. The movie's out."

Mentally checking her own kids' whereabouts, she told the wee caller that she wasn't his mother.

His response: "You have to be my mother, because this is the last dime I have."

Why, things are happening so fast that some school kids are having to take remedial current events.

HISTORICAL NOTE

It has been more than 50 years since World War I and the disastrous inflation that swept Germany after that conflict. However, a brief historical note in The Winthrop, Minnesota, News is a reminder of what inflation did on that occasion. In the words of The News, "We have read of postwar years that is WWI in Germany. We were reminded of this when a few pieces of currency from that time came into our possession. One was a million mark note. If it were valid now, with the current value of the mark now between 25 and 30 cents this note would represent $250,000 to $300,000. It is worthless, except as a curio." The Winthrowp News item was written before the dollar was devalued in late December, 1971.

Everyone agrees that inflation is bad, but few realize just how bad it can be. It can overwhelm the smartest of men and the best laid plans of government. Its only real preventive -- or cure-- is a balance between spending and taxation.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Pentagon Deceit in '58 Nearly Pushed U.S. into a Nuclear War

WASHINGTON — The top secret documents stoken a few weeks ago from Daniel Ellsberg contain startling evidence that the Pentagon in 1958 tried to trick President Eisenhower into using nuclear weapons against Communist China.

The military brass plotted, according to the documents, to testtheir new tactical nuclear weapons in combat. The opportunity came in 1958 during a crisis over two tiny, Nationalist-held islands, Quemoy and Matsu, which the Communists threatened to seize.

The generals deliberately deceived the White House, which was misled, therefore, into tentatively approving the use of nuclear weapons to defend the islands. In other words, the United States was ready to fight a nuclear war 16 years ago over two insignificant islands, which today draw no more than a shrug from our policy-makers.

The story of the Pentagon's deception, of course, has been swept under the top secret stamp. But in 1967, the shocking details were summarized in a secret Rand study by Morton Halpern, who later was to become a top White House security adviser.

While Daniel Ellsberg was with Rand, he had official access to the Halpern report and later made a copy of it in hopes he could someday testify about it to Congress. Halpern, who had classified the two-inch thick document in the first place, has now sought unsuccessfully to declassify it, but had no idea Ellsberg had a copy.

A few weeks ago, sneak thieves broke into Ellsberg's home and hauled off some valuables, including his private papers. Among them was a secret photo copy. Police recovered the papers, which the Justice Department then sought to obtain.But Ellsberg successfully arranged for Congress to get custody.

The explosive Rand report gives a chilling account of the Quemoy-Matsu crisis. Here are the highlights:

The two offshore islands came under intensive Communist artillery attack in 1958. The United States, which was sworn to help Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek defend the islands, assumed the Communists were softening them up for an imminent invasion.

This led to some urgent contingency planning in the Pentagon and the White House. The military brass, according to the report, wanted to use tactical nuclear weapons to destroy China's underground munitions dumps and gun emplacements.

The Pentagon, therefore, falsely informed the White House that the available Air Force planes had no bomb racks that could accommodate high-explosive conventional bombs powerful enough to knock out the underground installations. It would take "nukes," the Pentagon insisted, to do the job.

A copy of this false Pentagon message reached a top commander in the Pacific, who was also eager to test tactical nuclear weapons against the Chinese mainland but who was too honest to mislead the White House.

By secret "back channel" cable, privy only to the top brass, he informed them that they were wrong about the bomb racks. There were adequate racks, he reminded the Pentagon, to handle the most powerful conventional bombs.

The Pentagon fired back a hot order to the honests commander to "shut up," according to the Rand report, and the deception of the White Houe continued.

Impressed by this and other false information from the Pentagon,President Eisenhower, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and their advisers went ahead with tentative plans to use nuclear weapons against Communist China.

Wisely, Eisenhower kept in his own hands the final decision when the nuclear button was to be pushed. Meanwhile, the Quemoy-Matsu crisis happily simmered down.

While the Pentagon maneuvered the nation to the brink of nuclear war, the American people were kept in blissful ignorance of the danger. One of the most compelling comments on this secrecy was made by Christian Herter, the thoughtful, decent man who played a subordinate role in the 1958 crisis before succeeding Dulles as secretary of state the following year.

Those who lived through the Quemoy-Matsu developments, he once recounted, were acutely aware that they were in the midst of America's first nuclear crisis since the decision to bomb Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Yet to this day, the American people haven't been told how close they came to nuclear war.

Footnote: The deception described in the Rand report has been all too typical of the military brass. They continue to use "back channel" communications to exchange messages that they don't want their civilian superiors to see.

In the 1950s, the admirals ordered the Marine receptionist in Navby Secretary Francis Matthews' office to slip them a complete list of people who called upon the secretary and the exact number of minutes they remained.

More recently, the Joint Chiefs used the same system to spy on Henry Kissinger. A Navy yeoman actually rifled through burn bags and pilfered papers from Kissinger's briefcase forthe brass.

Unfortunately, the investigation of this incident was entrusted to Senate Armed Services Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., an apologist for the Pentagon, who ignored evidence implicating Adm. Thomas H. Moorer and let the former Joint Chiefs chairman off the hook.

Kiwanis Club refuses female membership

ELK GROVE, Ill. (AP) — The form letter, recruiting new members for the Elk Grove Kiwanis Club, began "Dear Sir."

But Mary Clark, Elk Grove village librarian, responded and became the first woman member of the organization last February. She resigned Tuesday, unwilling to accept a second-class membership.

Kiwanis International threatened the local chapter Oct. 12 with loss of charter unless it got rid of Miss Clark. Kiwanis by-laws forbid women as members.

The 20-member local first decided to defy the international's edict.

But later, pressured by Kiwanis officials, it voted on a compromise — Miss Clark could remain a member but could not hold office. It also resolved formally to fight at the international convention in Atlanta, Ga., for a change in the discriminatory by-laws.

"I was inducted as a full-fledged member and I'm not going to accept anything less," said Miss Clark, 27. "There are no hurt feelings, but I will not continue to work for a group that puts me in no-man's land."

Richard Harrell, president of the chapter, said the club must remain part of Kiwanis to fight for a change in membership rules.

At least two other local chapters — in New York and Colorado — have tried to fight the men-only regulation.

The president of the Chicago-based international, Roy W. Davis, said there were no women among the 278,966 worldwide members because the international did not recognize them as members. He refused to say if there were any unrecognized women members.

Miss Clark said she never noted any sexism among the chapter's members and said she considered herself an active member.

"I ranked fourth in peanut sales on Peanut Day," she said.

Ann Landers

Dull husband needs lovemaking manual

Dear Ann Landers: I'm sure my problem is a common one but no one has ever had the guts to write to you about it. Here goes.

I love my husband very much. Our marriage is great except for when it comes to sex. He is unable to satisfy me after four years of marriage. Please don't get me wrong. I'm not a nymphomaniac. Just a normal 27-year-old.

Because of this I am having an affair with a great guy who has the same problem with his wife. Our relationship is purely sexual. Neither of us wants to hurt our families. All we want to do is enjoy ALL aspects of life.

Since I DO love my husband, I would like to pass on to my husband my lover's techniques of turning me on. Our marriage would then be complete.

The problem is how do I teach him without arousing his suspicions? Is it worth the chance? -- Loving But Not Adequately Loved

Dear Loving: Most lovemaking "techniques" are instinctive. People with imagination think of them on their own. Don't be afraid to guide your husband subtly. But for heaven's sake, don't come up with too many new ideas all at once.

Dear Ann Landers: This past week my grandson was suspended from school (he's a 10th-grader) because he arrived on Monday morning so drunk he couldn't see straight. He fell out of his seat. Just as someone was about to help him off the floor he got sick and vomited all over the room.

When my daughter-in-law was called by the principal to come and take her son home she said, "Thank God he's not on drugs."

The boy's dad phoned that evening to tell me about the incident. Hewas greatly annoyed because the school didn't "handle it better." He thinks it is THEIR problem and instead of sendingthe boy home and suspending him for a month they should have offered him counseling.

In the meantime, my son and his wife see nothing wrong with a 10th-grader getting a few kicks from alcohol because "after all, it's not against the law, and we have a few cocktails every night at home before dinner."

Will you please print this letter and express your views; If my college-graduate son and his wife have such ideas, other so-called "educated"people in your reading audience might also benefit from what you have to say.-- Grandma

Dear Grandma: So alcohol is better than drugs, eh? Doesn't that foolish woman realize that alcohol IS a drug -- and it's the most abused of all?

Your grandson is going to have a very difficult time in life unless someone gets to him with help. His parents sound like a couple of losers. I know the type. They expect the school to do the job they failed to do. More ver, they are setting a very poor example by their own behavior.

Suggest to your college-graduate son that he put that boy into therapy at once. A tenth-grader who arrives at school drunk is in very serious trouble.

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin who lives in England tells me there are about 500 abortions performed in that country every week. (She is a nurse and has access to the figures through her husband who is a health statistician.)

Surely these are not all English women. Where do they come from?--T.L.

Dear T.L.: Of course many English women are included in that number but a large percenage of abortions in England are performed on West Germans, French and American women -- in tha. order.

There is a big differernce between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex -- Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and along, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

Prayer for today From Upper Room

"How sweet are thy words to my taste." (Psalm 119:103 RSV)

PRAYER: Dear God, open our eyes today through Thy living word. Make us ever ready to heed its truth and make it our very own. Help us to grow wiser in Thy truth and love. In the name of Jesus, who taught us to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed by thy name. Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever. Amen."

Prayer

for today From Upper Room

"How sweet are thy words to my taste." (Psalm 119:103 RSV)

PRAYER: Dear God, open our eyes today through Thy living word. Make us ever ready to heed its truth and make it our very own. Help us to grow wiser in Thy truth and love. In the name of Jesus, who taught us to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed by thy name. Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever. Amen."

Recreation availability

By DALE LEWIS

Chinese ping-pong anyone.. Or how about a two-mile jog around the heated confines of a spacious gym.. According to a recent survey, that's just part of the winter-time recreation now open to the public in the area, free of charge.

Despite the lack of a city-wide co-ordinated recreational program, adults and students alike now have at least a partial schedule of activities open to them during winter weeknights and weekends.

Barring any scheduled high school events, the Senior High Fieldhouse is open to the public every Monday and Thursday night from 7 to 9 p.m. The men can take their pick from basketball, jogging, weight-lifting, or even ping-pong. The women get the Senior High Gym the same nights and hours for volleyball, basketball, or a workout on exercising equipment.

Area students in Church League basketball rule the courts at the Middle School and Junior High Gyms every Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday night from 6 to 10 p.m. And the Old Lincoln School Gym entertains students aged 9 to 16 every Wednesday night from 6 to 8 p.m. with an assortment of basketball, volleyball, or ping-pong. Everyone has to dig into their pocket change on Friday nights for any kind of sports activity as the local gyms close down except for school-sponsored events. But the price is relatively small for anyone who likes bowling or roller-skating, the only other winter-time recreation open to the public then.

Saturdays and Sundays are limited to students for the most part as the Senior High Fieldhouse is open from 1 to 3 p.m. for the youth group, while the Old Lincoln School Gym hosts children to age 9 from 1 to 4 p.m. Basketball, volleyball, and ping-pong is the major fare on weekends, too.

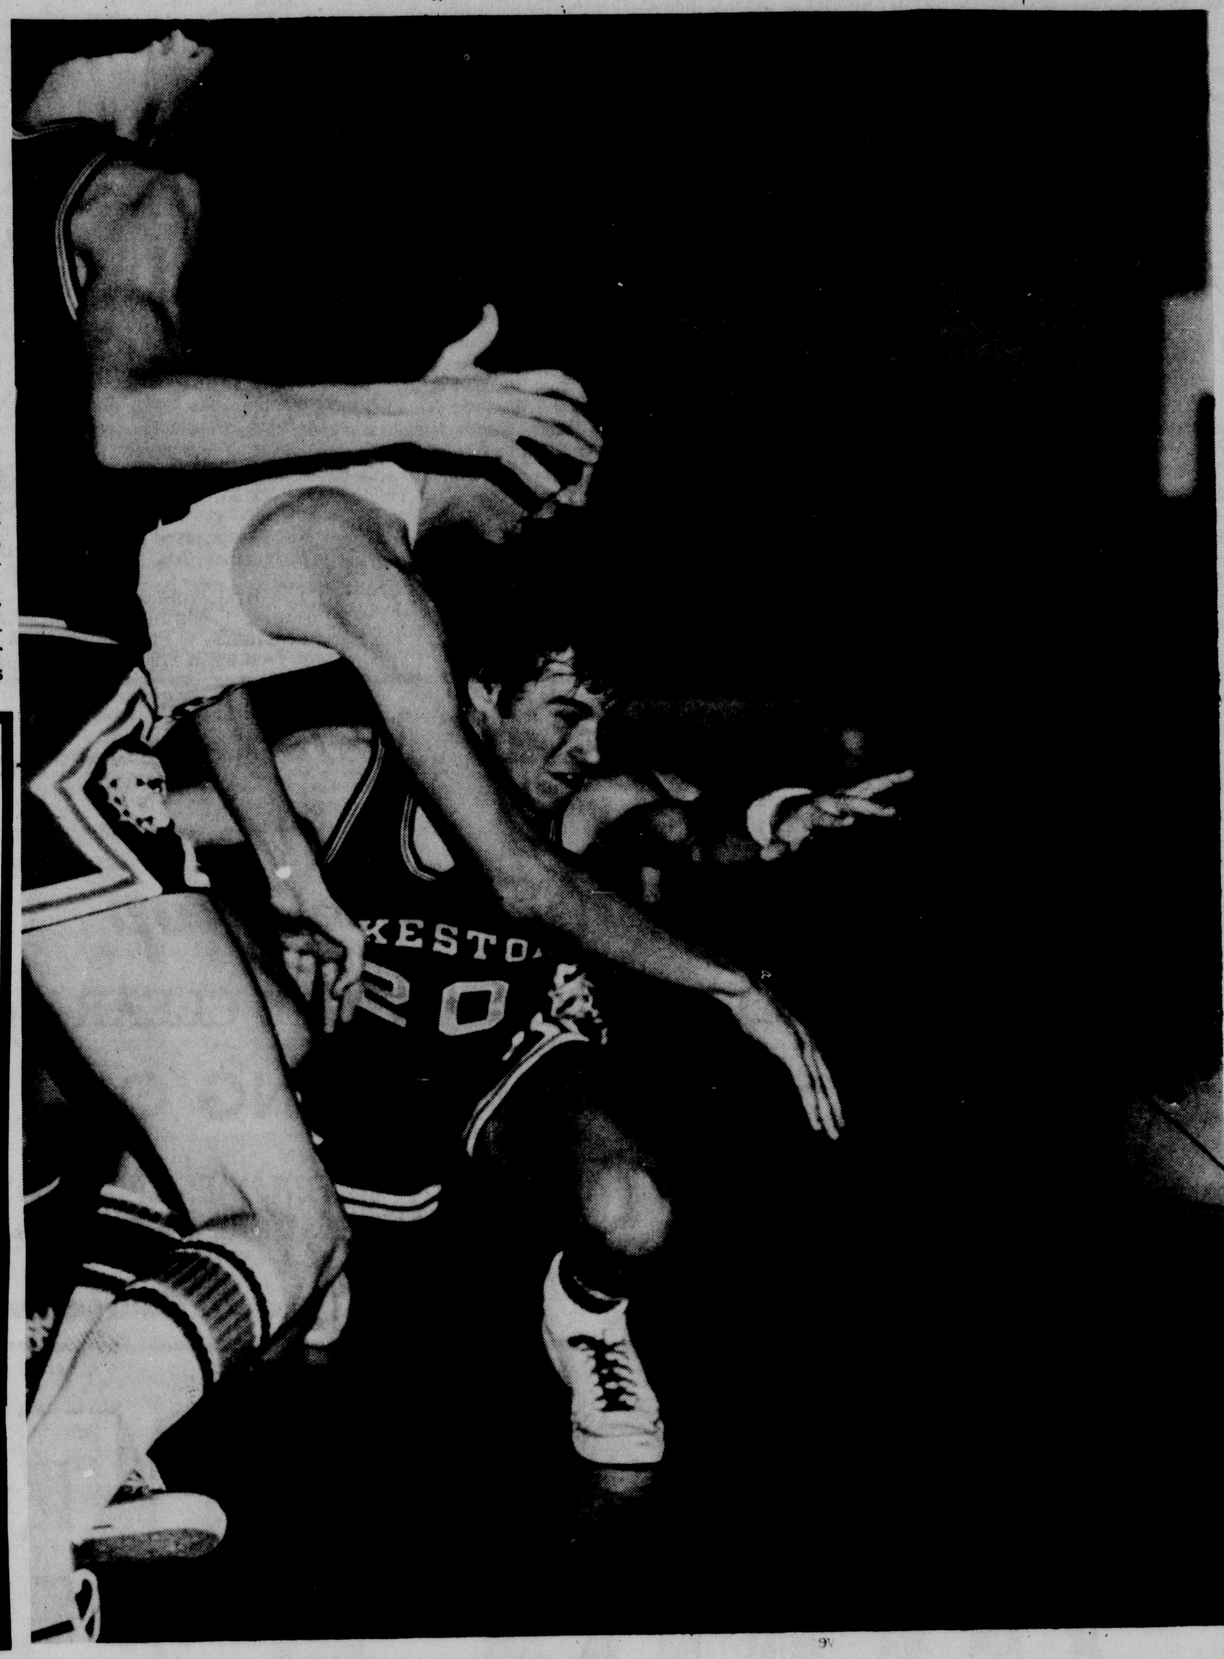
Ticket sales high

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Crowd figures released for the World Football League's Dec. 5 championship game at Birmingham, Ala., were 10,000 higher than actual attendance, the Orlando Sentinel Star has reported.

The newspaper said Thursday it learned from the Commercial Bank of Birmingham that total attendance at the game was 22,918 and paid attendance was 20,985. The bank handled distribution of the gate receipts.

The WFL, which was heavily criticized for padding attendance figures during the regular season, had reported 32,376 fans at the game.



Sikeston's Bruce Lawrence (20) and an unidentified Dexter player appear to be waving by to the basketball as the orange sphere rolls away from the two players and out of bounds during the consolation game in the Bloomfield Christmas tournament in which Dexter won 67-62. Sikeston's Hal Presley (34) watches the action.

Southeast battles to semifinals

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Lincoln meets Southeast Missouri and Northeast Missouri takes on host Southwest Missouri tonight in the semifinals of the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament here.

In afternoon consolation games, Missouri-Rolla, 4-3, meets Central Missouri State, 3-4, and Northwest Missouri, 4-5, is paired with Pittsburg State, 1-5.

Lincoln, 4-1, had its hands full with Rolla in first-round action Thursday before moving ahead to stay, 59-57, with 3½ minutes remaining. The Miners, trailing 32-28 at the half, moved into ties five times in the second half.

Southeast Missouri, 4-2, and Central Missouri fought neck-and-neck through much of their contest before Southeast pulled from a 78-78 tie and kept the Mules at arm's length, 105-100. The Mules hit a phenomenal 24-or-24 from the free-throw line, but they suffered 21 turnovers. Their Rick Gosnell was game high-score with 29.

The Northeast Bulldogs raised their record to 3-4 owith an easy 91-74 victory over hapless Pittsburg.

Southwest Missouri, 4-4, paced by forward Daryel Garrison, was never threatened by Northwest Missouri State en route to its 92-62 victory. Garrison scored 23 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Recreation availability

By DALE LEWIS

Chinese ping-pong anyone.. Or how about a two-mile jog around the heated confines of a spacious gym.. According to a recent survey, that's just part of the winter-time recreation now open to the public in the area, free of charge.

Despite the lack of a city-wide co-ordinated recreational program, adults and students alike now have at least a partial schedule of activities open to them during winter weeknights and weekends.

Barring any scheduled high school events, the Senior High Fieldhouse is open to the public every Monday and Thursday night from 7 to 9 p.m. The men can take their pick from basketball, jogging, weight-lifting, or even ping-pong. The women get the Senior High Gym the same nights and hours for volleyball, basketball, or a workout on exercising equipment.

Area students in Church League basketball rule the courts at the Middle School and Junior High Gyms every Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday night from 6 to 10 p.m. And the Old Lincoln School Gym entertains students aged 9 to 16 every Wednesday night from 6 to 8 p.m. with an assortment of basketball, volleyball, or ping-pong. Everyone has to dig into their pocket change on Friday nights for any kind of sports activity as the local gyms close down except for school-sponsored events. But the price is relatively small for anyone who likes bowling or roller-skating, the only other winter-time recreation open to the public then.

Saturdays and Sundays are limited to students for the most part as the Senior High Fieldhouse is open from 1 to 3 p.m. for the youth group, while the Old Lincoln School Gym hosts children to age 9 from 1 to 4 p.m. Basketball, volleyball, and ping-pong is the major fare on weekends, too.

For a complete day by day breakdown of the recreation available at different locations during the week, see the schedule below which is subject to pre-emption by high school sports or other scheduled civic events.

Ticket sales high

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Crowd figures released for the World Football League's Dec. 5 championship game at Birmingham, Ala., were 10,000 higher than actual attendance, the Orlando Sentinel Star has reported.

The newspaper said Thursday it learned from the Commercial Bank of Birmingham that total attendance at the game was 22,918 and paid attendance was 20,985. The bank handled distribution of the gate receipts.

The WFL, which was heavily criticized for padding attendance figures during the regular season, had reported 32,376 fans at the game.

The other side

SPRINGFIELD--The wife of a conservation agent has to put up with a life that would tax the patience of Mary Worth.

On the other hand, the rewards are great. There is...but let Mrs. Bob Morris, wife of the Green County conservation agent tell you about it in an article she recently wrote for the Willard Reporter:

"It is twelve midnight, I'm watching the late movie, it is raining outside and the phone is ringing. My mind is diverted from my thoughts of what to wear to work tomorrow to the ringing of the phone. On the other end of the line is a man who lives near Fair Grove reporting someone using a light to shoot a deer. Since my husband has been gone since four o'clock this morning I get on the phone and call his Regional Supervisor who can call him on his car radio.

"It is deer season now and I don't get to see much of Bob because he has to work a lot. Because of the many calls we receive it is important for me to know the Wildlife Code and laws pertaining to his job. I enjoy being able to talk with different people and discuss conservation. I'm really surprised at the number of women who are interested in hunting and fishing.

"I like to feel as though I am a part of Bob's job so I get involved as much as I can. When he has a radio program or television show to prepare for I always help him rehearse and try to make constructive comments. He keeps telling me that he will have me on television sometime but as of yet I haven't made it.

"Although Bob is not with me as much as I would like, I am glad he is a conservation agent. He has always enjoyed hunting and fishing so the job was a natural for him. He enjoys his work so much that it just makes life a lot more enjoyable for both of us.

"I wish I could inspire everyone to become aware of the great need in the field of conservation. I've learned a lot about unwide land use such as bulldozing all the timber down and things like deer poaching. What kind of person would do a senseless thing like that. Bob and I have seen litter thrown on the river banks, pollution being dumped in our streams and forests being burned off. Things like this will soon ruin our great state and I'm glad I can help put a stop to it.

"Long hours, thousands of phone calls, hundreds of thermos bottles of coffee and a great respect of my husband's job make my life the interesting and enjoyable one that it is. I can hope that through his work, and what support I can give him, that in the years to come we will have the beautiful world we all know and have known."

Salary spiral

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Will Catfish Hunter's record $3.75 million pact with the New York Yankees provide the jumping off point for a new wave of salary demands from baseball's top stars?

A survey of some of the game's biggest names conducted by The Associated Press shows there is considerable difference among major leaguers as to how they will be affected by Hunter's lucrative contract.

Some felt this was just an isolated incident, with special conditions — namely, Hunter's having been declared a free agent by an arbitration panel. Others, however, said they felt maybe they could cash in, even within the constrictions of the reserve clause.

"It's kind of overwhelming," said Brooks Robinson, Baltimore's veteran third baseman, about Hunter's five-year contract. "But it won't affect any other negotiations, because this is a freak case. It probably won't push salaries up."

First baseman Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers, the National League's Most Valuable Player last year, agreed that the key factor to be considered was that Hunter was a free agent.

"I don't think his contract will have much effect on my salary negotiations, because I don't have the opportunity to offer my services to anybody else but the Dodgers," Garvey said.

A number of other players mentioned how the publicity of the Hunter affair could have an effect beyond the actual individual case.

"This should show the courts how baseball's reserve clause is detrimental to wage earning," said Oakland third baseman and team captain Sal Bando. "In any case, salaries and conditions should improve now."

But from the executive side, President Gabe Paul of the Yankees said the Hunter case could solidify the reserve system. "I think this strengthens the understanding of the reserve clause — and what could happen without it."

Vida Blue, one of Hunter's ex-teammates on the Oakland A's and himself once a celebrated holdout against A's owner Charles O. Finley, was among those who speculated that financially, this could be a breakthrough for all players.

"Bob Gibson, Steve Carlton and Tom Seaver will set the pace in contract negotiating," Blue predicted. "Nolan Ryan, Bert Blyleven and myself are in the next class, and will be demanding a much larger slice of the pie."

Quail hunting

Missouri quail hunters have until Jan. 15 to pursue bobwhites. Quail hunting has been spotty over Missouri, as had been predicted after a wet spring. The daily bag is eight and possession limit 16. Hunters will need a 1975 premit after Jan. 1. Resident hunting permit is $5.90 and a combination resident hunting-fishing permit is $10.40.

The other side

SPRINGFIELD--The wife of a conservation agent has to put up with a life that would tax the patience of Mary Worth.

On the other hand, the rewards are great. There is...but let Mrs. Bob Morris, wife of the Green County conservation agent tell you about it in an article she recently wrote for the Willard Reporter:

"It is twelve midnight, I'm watching the late movie, it is raining outside and the phone is ringing. My mind is diverted from my thoughts of what to wear to work tomorrow to the ringing of the phone. On the other end of the line is a man who lives near Fair Grove reporting someone using a light to shoot a deer. Since my husband has been gone since four o'clock this morning I get on the phone and call his Regional Supervisor who can call him on his car radio.

"It is deer season now and I don't get to see much of Bob because he has to work a lot. Because of the many calls we receive it is important for me to know the Wildlife Code and laws pertaining to his job. I enjoy being able to talk with different people and discuss conservation. I'm really surprised at the number of women who are interested in hunting and fishing.

"I like to feel as though I am a part of Bob's job so I get involved as much as I can. When he has a radio program or television show to prepare for I always help him rehearse and try to make constructive comments. He keeps telling me that he will have me on television sometime but as of yet I haven't made it.

"Although Bob is not with me as much as I would like, I am glad he is a conservation agent. He has always enjoyed hunting and fishing so the job was a natural for him. He enjoys his work so much that it just makes life a lot more enjoyable for both of us.

"I wish I could inspire everyone to become aware of the great need in the field of conservation. I've learned a lot about unwide land use such as bulldozing all the timber down and things like deer poaching. What kind of person would do a senseless thing like that. Bob and I have seen litter thrown on the river banks, pollution being dumped in our streams and forests being burned off. Things like this will soon ruin our great state and I'm glad I can help put a stop to it.

"Long hours, thousands of phone calls, hundreds of thermos bottles of coffee and a great respect of my husband's job make my life the interesting and enjoyable one that it is. I can hope that through his work, and what support I can give him, that in the years to come we will have the beautiful world we all know and have known."

Salary spiral

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Will Catfish Hunter's record $3.75 million pact with the New York Yankees provide the jumping off point for a new wave of salary demands from baseball's top stars?

A survey of some of the game's biggest names conducted by The Associated Press shows there is considerable difference among major leaguers as to how they will be affected by Hunter's lucrative contract.

Some felt this was just an isolated incident, with special conditions — namely, Hunter's having been declared a free agent by an arbitration panel. Others, however, said they felt maybe they could cash in, even within the constrictions of the reserve clause.

"It's kind of overwhelming," said Brooks Robinson, Baltimore's veteran third baseman, about Hunter's five-year contract. "But it won't affect any other negotiations, because this is a freak case. It probably won't push salaries up."

First baseman Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers, the National League's Most Valuable Player last year, agreed that the key factor to be considered was that Hunter was a free agent.

"I don't think his contract will have much effect on my salary negotiations, because I don't have the opportunity to offer my services to anybody else but the Dodgers," Garvey said.

A number of other players mentioned how the publicity of the Hunter affair could have an effect beyond the actual individual case.

"This should show the courts how baseball's reserve clause is detrimental to wage earning," said Oakland third baseman and team captain Sal Bando. "In any case, salaries and conditions should improve now."

But from the executive side, President Gabe Paul of the Yankees said the Hunter case could solidify the reserve system. "I think this strengthens the understanding of the reserve clause — and what could happen without it."

Vida Blue, one of Hunter's ex-teammates on the Oakland A's and himself once a celebrated holdout against A's owner Charles O. Finley, was among those who speculated that financially, this could be a breakthrough for all players.

"Bob Gibson, Steve Carlton and Tom Seaver will set the pace in contract negotiating," Blue predicted. "Nolan Ryan, Bert Blyleven and myself are in the next class, and will be demanding a much larger slice of the pie."

Ordaining of women tops religion news

NEW YORK (AP) — The precedent-breaking ordination of 11 women as Episcopal priests in defiance of church regulations is considered by the country's religion news reporters as the top religion story of 1974.

The event, which still is having repercussions in the denomination as well as in other Protestant and Catholic churches, headed the list of newsmakers in an annual yearend poll of the Religion Newswriters Association.

Its members, including specialists covering religion for newspapers, news magazines and wire services, ranked other religion stories of the year in this order:

Second: The widening split among the 2.9 million members of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod between so-called conservatives and moderates in a dispute over Biblical interpretation.

The firing of the Rev. Dr. John Tietjen as president of the church's Concordia Seminary in St. Louis sent most of the faculty and students into a seminary-in-exile on nearby sister campuses, backed by a newly organized wing of the church.

Third: The impact on religious leaders and institutions of the Watergate scandals, causing many to rethink their relationships to government and to political parties.

Fourth: The tooling up by religious institutions to fight world hunger, as facts about the crisis in food became more widely disseminated.

Fifth: The "exorcist" phenomenon, which broke early in the year as the result of a popular movie on the subject, producing a flurry of alleged cases of demon-possession and theological debate about it.

The poll was taken by Roy Larson of the Chicago Sun-Times; James H. Bowman of the Chicago Daily News and James Robinson of the Chicago Tribune.

Prayer experiment aids crop yield

NEW YORK (AP) — With county officials measuring the results, experimenters on an Ohio farm say they found that portions of a field that had been the object of loving prayers yielded the biggest crop.

The case offered an unusual instance of recent stepped-up interest in psychic phenomena, viewed by many with keen skepticism.

"Somehow God's creative energy of growth can be channeled through us even to plants," says Gus Alexander of Wright State University, who holds a doctorate in communications research and who set up the project.

It was carried out on a soybean field near Jamestown, Ohio, east of Dayton, with daily prayerful attention of a church group focused on six designated plots, but not on six adjoining control plots.

Alexander says the yield of soybeans receiving the special attention was increased by 4 per cent over the comparable control plot, even though the experiment had extended over only a third of the growing season.

"If put to use, our psychic abilities — our abilities of prayer — could vastly improve the world's food supply," says Alexander, who teaches speech communication and who began studying psychic phenomena about a year ago.

"By some means, when a person concentrates on sending his love, God channels that love to others, to a pet or even a plot of soybeans," he said in a telephone interview.

In checking results of the experiment late in October, the Greene county agent's technical assistant, Donald H. Tate, was on hand to weigh the yields from the six experimental and six control plots.

According to the figures, five of the experimental strips had produced heavier yields than had adjacent control strips, while in the sixth case, the control strip had a slightly greater yield.

In the experiment, a group of 10 people at Dayton's Church of the Golden Key, supplied with diagrams of the soybean plots, took on the task of "sending love" to the experimental areas each night at 11:30 p.m. for about 40 days.

The Rev. Noel Cornely, founder and minister of the non-denominational church which incorporates ideas of various major religions and which works with extra-sensory perception, says:

"These experiments deal with the direct communication of energy, as a kind of nourishment."

Tree lends unique air to cantata

First Assembly of God Church, 306 S. Kingshighway, celebrated the birth of Christ in a unique way this year as the sanctuary choir presented J. W. Peterson's Christmas cantata, "Love Transcending", from a 20-foot tall tree designed and built especially to hold the choir members.

The "singing Christmas tree" was directed by the Rev. Len Meyers associate pastor. Accompanists were Miss Marsha Newman of Oran, pianist, and Mrs. Jane Whitten of Sikeston, organist.

Soloists were Russ Whitten, Mrs. Sharon Bryant, Allen Henderson, Mrs. Ruth Wells, Miss Jean Frala and Max Teague. Nyman "Matt" Matthews did the narration.

The tree was decorated in fern, Christmas lights and red velvet bows by Mrs. Geneva Page, Mrs. Agnes McCollum, Mrs. Debbie Jackson and Matthews.

Scenes were also presented simultaneously as the cantata described the songs. The children in the scenes were Tammy Wells, portraying Mary, David Russell Whitten, as Joseph; Kimberli Dawn Meyers, as an angel; and Mark Savage, as an angel.

The Rev. Loren Wooten, pastor, said he believes the tree was quite effective in presenting the Christmas story in song and may be used again next year since it easily comes apart for storage.

Catholics soften stance on Masons

NEW YORK (AP) — Roman Catholic laymen, barred from belonging to Masonic lodges for more than two centuries, now may do so without church objections so long as the particular lodge doesn't foster anti-Catholicism.

That's the interpretation put by U.S. Catholic leadership on a recent letter from the Vatican's office on doctrinal matters.

The step comes after several years of exploratory friendly gestures between some American Catholic leaders and Masonic groups, chiefly sessions arranged by the Rev. John A. O'Brien of the University of Notre Dame.

Father O'Brien, recently hospitalized with a stroke, became the first Catholic priest to speak at a Masonic meeting in 1964 in South Bend, Ind., and afterward took part in similar conciliatory gatherings in the rising ecumenical mood of the period, saying:

"We're all children of the same Father, and it's about time that we put our brotherhood into practice."

Freemasonry, an international fraternal order open to all believers in God, includes about 4 million Masons in this country, with lodges in each state operating under an independent, statewide grand lodge.

Although some Catholics previously have been members, despite the broad church prohibition against it, the new ruling limits application of the ban only to cases in which a specific lodge opposes the church.

The letter, from the Vatican's Cardinal Franjo Seper, says that the church's canon 2335 still stands, subjecting Catholics to excommunication if they join Masonic or other associations which "plot" against the church.

But he adds that it may be given a "strict interpretation," that is, applied only in instances of specific lodges where such anti-Catholicism exists.

The ban against Catholic membership first was imposed by Pope Clement XII in 1738 on grounds that Freemasonry fostered vague, naturalistic religion, and involved secret oaths and conspiracy against Catholicism.

Over the years, there has been a succession of papal condemnations, proscribing Catholic participation.

A statement from John Cardinal Krol, of Philadelphia, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, says the Vatican letter makes clear that the longstanding prohibition is not equally applicable to all Masonic groups.

Catholics seek ties with Jews

NEW YORK (AP) — On a worldwide basis, the Roman Catholic Church is launching an effort to rid itself of insinuations against Jews and establish deepened, working bonds with Judaism.

Although that faith gave birth to Christianity, mutual misimpressions have marred their attitudes toward each other for 2,000 years, the Vatican says, adding that conditions now are open for building a "new relationship."

"The spiritual bonds and historical links binding the Church to Judaism ... render obligatory a better mutual understanding and renewed mutual esteem," the Vatican said Thursday.

A Jewish leader hailed the document generally, saying its implementation "would constitute nothing less than a revolution in esteem between Catholics and Jews everywhere."

Rabbi Marc H. Tannenberg, cosecretary of the International Jewish Committee for Interreligious Consultations, said the guidelines assert a "conversionary intention" toward Jews, implying that Judaism is inadequate for them, and that God's covenant with them has ended.

This is "totally unacceptable to the Jewish conscience," he says, adding that Judaism centers "on the critical conviction that God's covenant with Israel is everlasting" and not subject to substitution.

He says the matter will be taken up with the Vatican's new commission on Catholic-Jewish relations at a meeting in Rome Jan. 7-9.

The guidelines, issued by the Vatican's Christian unity secretariat, says in urging increased dialogue with Judaism that the Church by its nature "must preach Jesus Christ to the world."

"Lest the witness of Catholics to Jesus Christ should give offense to Jews, they must take care to live and spread their Christian faith while maintaining the strictest respect for religious liberty," the document adds.

On other matters, it calls for major Catholic initiatives to instill a more positive view of Judaism, emphasizing that Jesus, his apostles and first followers were Jews and that he used teaching methods of a rabbi.

The document reiterates the Second Vatican Council's declaration that Jesus' death cannot be blamed on all Jews then nor Jews today, and calls for preaching and teaching to clarify New Testament passages commonly misinterpreted to put "the Jewish people ... in an unfavorable light."

This week's Sunday School lesson

Scripture: Matthew 5:17-48; 7:24-29; 10:24-25 13:33-52

THE MASTER TEACHER

Matthew seeks in today's lesson to provide a portrait of Jesus as the Christ. He wants us to view Christ as the Messiah and so he tells much about the ministry, death and resurrection of Jesus.

All writers about Christ had their special objectives, much as writers today handle contemporary problems. Thus it is not unusual to find some stories in Matthew that are not covered by Mark, Luke, or John.

Matthew drew upon many sources of his material. Some historians believe he used Mark for a good source as well as a collection of the sayings of Jesus. Matthew no doubt used some other materials that Luke used as well.

The Interpreter's Commentary notes that Matthew prepared his book to point up these claims:

(1) The church is the true Israel, replacing the old Israel in the center of God's purpose,

(2) The church in the present age is a mixed body, including both worthy and unworthy among its members,

(3) The church is called to live in a new and higher way of righteousness that exceeds even the Jewish law in the radical quality of its demands.

Thus the reader is presented the story of Christ as one with a mission to provide the answer to predictions made in the Old Testament. In the process Jesus becomes the teacher.

Matthew believes the Sermon on the Mount summarizes the teachings of Jesus, who interpreted the law with more prophetic freedom than did the orthodox Jewish leaders.

Whenever a teacher proposes some new ideas or concepts he can expect some criticism. This is shown in contemporary discussions of what one newspaper termed the "Ji-Whiz Religion." A self-proclaimed messiah from Korea asked, "Does God dwell in the New York skyscrapers?" He also upset some individuals when he said, "There are signs that God is leaving America."

Such ideas are not new to Americans. Through the years we have heard threats from Jonathan Edwards, Dwight Moody, Billy Sunday, Aimee Semple McPherson, Billy Graham, and others.

Matthew tells us "The crowds were astonished" at the message Jesus gave. Not only were they surprised at His message but they were moved by the feelings He displayed for their future.

Jesus frequently turned to the parable to make His message clearer to the Jews. As The Living Bible paraphrased one of these parables:

"The Kingdom of Heaven can be compared to a woman making bread. She takes a measure of flour and mixes in the yeast until it permeates every part of the dough."

This, certainly, was an example that those in the crowd could comprehend. Jesus had a goal to teach great truths in terms so simple that all received the message. In some thirty parables Jesus explained what the Kingdom of Heaven was like.

Jesus represents the great teacher in His work. In a book written in 1919 by William Merrill, he pointed out that Jesus taught "to make men more conscientious, more eager, more active in mind and more sense."

"He came not to answer questions but to ask them: not to settle men's souls but to provoke them; not to save men from problems but to save them from their indolence."

The Bible is a textbook, a set of guidelines for us to use in planning our lives. Jesus sought to fill in the difficult areas, offering advice for the undecided, the confused, or the skeptic.

Jesus remains our master teacher. Whenever He encountered a difficult situation, He used the occasion to teach. When necessary, He used irony and sarcasm to arouse His listeners. He could shock and He could plea for action.

Jesus urged His people to put their beliefs into action.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

THE BIBLE

168: A Prophet Warns Jeroboam

Acting on the advice of his counselors, Jeroboam erected two golden calf-idols, and he placed one in Bethel and one in Dan, thinking that the people would not go to Jerusalem to offer sacrifices at the Temple.

He ordained priests not of the tribe of Levi, placed shrines on the hills, and scheduled the annual Tabernacle Festival at Bethel, where he himself offered sacrifices to the calf-idol. But a prophet of the Lord came up to him and shouted that a child named Josiah would be born into the family line of David, and that he would sacrifice upon the altar the priests from the shrines on the hills. As a sign he forecast that the altar would split apart, and the ashes on it spill to the ground.

The king was so angry that he kept shaking his fist at the prophet. Suddenly, the king's arm was paralyzed in that position. And then a wide crack appeared in the altar, and ashes poured out, proving what the prophet had said. Then Jeraboam pleaded, ". . . Entreat now the face of the Lord thy God, and pray for me, that my hand be restored me again. And the man of God besought the Lord, and the king's hand was restored him again, and it became as it was before." (I Kings 13:6)

Catholics soften stance on Masons

NEW YORK (AP) — Roman Catholic laymen, barred from belonging to Masonic lodges for more than two centuries, now may do so without church objections so long as the particular lodge doesn't foster anti-Catholicism.

That's the interpretation put by U.S. Catholic leadership on a recent letter from the Vatican's office on doctrinal matters.

The step comes after several years of exploratory friendly gestures between some American Catholic leaders and Masonic groups, chiefly sessions arranged by the Rev. John A. O'Brien of the University of Notre Dame.

Father O'Brien, recently hospitalized with a stroke, became the first Catholic priest to speak at a Masonic meeting in 1964 in South Bend, Ind., and afterward took part in similar conciliatory gatherings in the rising ecumenical mood of the period, saying:

"We're all children of the same Father, and it's about time that we put our brotherhood into practice."

Freemasonry, an international fraternal order open to all believers in God, includes about 4 million Masons in this country, with lodges in each state operating under an independent, statewide grand lodge.

Although some Catholics previously have been members, despite the broad church prohibition against it, the new ruling limits application of the ban only to cases in which a specific lodge opposes the church.

The letter, from the Vatican's Cardinal Franjo Seper, says that the church's canon 2335 still stands, subjecting Catholics to excommunication if they join Masonic or other associations which "plot" against the church.

But he adds that it may be given a "strict interpretation," that is, applied only in instances of specific lodges where such anti-Catholicism exists.

The ban against Catholic membership first was imposed by Pope Clement XII in 1738 on grounds that Freemasonry fostered vague, naturalistic religion, and involved secret oaths and conspiracy against Catholicism.

Over the years, there has been a succession of papal condemnations, proscribing Catholic participation.

A statement from John Cardinal Krol, of Philadelphia, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, says the Vatican letter makes clear that the longstanding prohibition is not equally applicable to all Masonic groups.

Catholics seek ties with Jews

NEW YORK (AP) — On a worldwide basis, the Roman Catholic Church is launching an effort to rid itself of insinuations against Jews and establish deepened, working bonds with Judaism.

Although that faith gave birth to Christianity, mutual misimpressions have marred their attitudes toward each other for 2,000 years, the Vatican says, adding that conditions now are open for building a "new relationship."

"The spiritual bonds and historical links binding the Church to Judaism ... render obligatory a better mutual understanding and renewed mutual esteem," the Vatican said Thursday.

A Jewish leader hailed the document generally, saying its implementation "would constitute nothing less than a revolution in esteem between Catholics and Jews everywhere."

Rabbi Marc H. Tannenberg, cosecretary of the International Jewish Committee for Interreligious Consultations, said the guidelines assert a "conversionary intention" toward Jews, implying that Judaism is inadequate for them, and that God's covenant with them has ended.

This is "totally unacceptable to the Jewish conscience," he says, adding that Judaism centers "on the critical conviction that God's covenant with Israel is everlasting" and not subject to substitution.

He says the matter will be taken up with the Vatican's new commission on Catholic-Jewish relations at a meeting in Rome Jan. 7-9.

The guidelines, issued by the Vatican's Christian unity secretariat, says in urging increased dialogue with Judaism that the Church by its nature "must preach Jesus Christ to the world."

"Lest the witness of Catholics to Jesus Christ should give offense to Jews, they must take care to live and spread their Christian faith while maintaining the strictest respect for religious liberty," the document adds.

On other matters, it calls for major Catholic initiatives to instill a more positive view of Judaism, emphasizing that Jesus, his apostles and first followers were Jews and that he used teaching methods of a rabbi.

The document reiterates the Second Vatican Council's declaration that Jesus' death cannot be blamed on all Jews then nor Jews today, and calls for preaching and teaching to clarify New Testament passages commonly misinterpreted to put "the Jewish people ... in an unfavorable light."

This week's Sunday School lesson

Scripture: Matthew 5:17-48; 7:24-29; 10:24-25 13:33-52

THE MASTER TEACHER

Matthew seeks in today's lesson to provide a portrait of Jesus as the Christ. He wants us to view Christ as the Messiah and so he tells much about the ministry, death and resurrection of Jesus.

All writers about Christ had their special objectives, much as writers today handle contemporary problems. Thus it is not unusual to find some stories in Matthew that are not covered by Mark, Luke, or John.

Matthew drew upon many sources of his material. Some historians believe he used Mark for a good source as well as a collection of the sayings of Jesus. Matthew no doubt used some other materials that Luke used as well.

The Interpreter's Commentary notes that Matthew prepared his book to point up these claims:

(1) The church is the true Israel, replacing the old Israel in the center of God's purpose,

(2) The church in the present age is a mixed body, including both worthy and unworthy among its members,

(3) The church is called to live in a new and higher way of righteousness that exceeds even the Jewish law in the radical quality of its demands.

Thus the reader is presented the story of Christ as one with a mission to provide the answer to predictions made in the Old Testament. In the process Jesus becomes the teacher.

Matthew believes the Sermon on the Mount summarizes the teachings of Jesus, who interpreted the law with more prophetic freedom than did the orthodox Jewish leaders.

Whenever a teacher proposes some new ideas or concepts he can expect some criticism. This is shown in contemporary discussions of what one newspaper termed the "Ji-Whiz Religion." A self-proclaimed messiah from Korea asked, "Does God dwell in the New York skyscrapers?" He also upset some individuals when he said, "There are signs that God is leaving America."

Such ideas are not new to Americans. Through the years we have heard threats from Jonathan Edwards, Dwight Moody, Billy Sunday, Aimee Semple McPherson, Billy Graham, and others.

Matthew tells us "The crowds were astonished" at the message Jesus gave. Not only were they surprised at His message but they were moved by the feelings He displayed for their future.

Jesus frequently turned to the parable to make His message clearer to the Jews. As The Living Bible paraphrased one of these parables:

"The Kingdom of Heaven can be compared to a woman making bread. She takes a measure of flour and mixes in the yeast until it permeates every part of the dough."

This, certainly, was an example that those in the crowd could comprehend. Jesus had a goal to teach great truths in terms so simple that all received the message. In some thirty parables Jesus explained what the Kingdom of Heaven was like.

Jesus represents the great teacher in His work. In a book written in 1919 by William Merrill, he pointed out that Jesus taught "to make men more conscientious, more eager, more active in mind and more sense."

"He came not to answer questions but to ask them; not to settle men's souls but to provoke them; not to save men from problems but to save them from their indolence."

The Bible is a textbook, a set of guidelines for us to use in planning our lives. Jesus sought to fill in the difficult areas, offering advice for the undecided, the confused, or the skeptic.

Jesus remains our master teacher. Whenever He encountered a difficult situation, He used the occasion to teach. When necessary, He used irony and sarcasm to arouse His listeners. He could shock and He could plea for action.

Jesus urged His people to put their beliefs into action.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

THE BIBLE

168: A Prophet Warns Jeroboam

Acting on the advice of his counselors, Jeroboam erected two golden calf-idols, and he placed one in Bethel and one in Dan, thinking that the people would not go to Jerusalem to offer sacrifices at the Temple.

He ordained priests not of the tribe of Levi, placed shrines on the hills, and scheduled the annual Tabernacle Festival at Bethel, where he himself offered sacrifices to the calf-idol. But a prophet of the Lord came up to him and shouted that a child named Josiah would be born into the family line of David, and that he would sacrifice upon the altar the priests from the shrines on the hills. As a sign he forecast that the altar would split apart, and the ashes on it spill to the ground.

The king was so angry that he kept shaking his fist at the prophet. Suddenly, the king's arm was paralyzed in that position. And then a wide crack appeared in the altar, and ashes poured out, proving what the prophet had said. Then Jeroboam pleaded, ". . . Entreat now the face of the Lord thy God, and pray for me, that my hand be restored me again. And the man of God besought the Lord, and the king's hand was restored him again, and it became as it was before." (I Kings 13:6)

Dr. Lamb

Spastic colon can be helped

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you give me some information on spastic colon? I'm 36 years old and have this problem. Excitement seems to cause uncontrolled bowel movements, more than what I eat, although certain foods or coffee will do the same thing.

I have had this problem for six years. Quit drinking alcohol four years ago. My brother and sister also have this problem.

I had an X ray of my colon and the specialist told me there was nothing wrong, except a couple of spots on the intestinal wall. At times, the bowel movement may be firm, but it seems within a few minutes, it's right back to the bathroom.

DEAR READER — Spastic colon means that the muscles in the wall of the colon overcontract, or actually cramp. This makes it possible to have the food residue delayed in passage. During this delay, too much water is squeezed out and absorbed, causing small, hard, bowel movements.

The same rapid, excessive muscle contractions can cause diarrhea. It is not unusual to have both constipation and diarrhea with spastic colon.

You will need to set up a program of proper eating and actually train your bowel to help you avoid this problem. That covers a lot of territory. For more information on how to do this, write me at P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019, and ask for the booklet on spastic colon. Send 50 cents to cover costs.

It's true that excitement and psychological factors can influence how your colon reacts. That is why some doctors prescribe tranquilizers as part of the treatment program.

Coffee is something that anyone with digestive or bowel problems should avoid. The caffeine increases nervousness and has the opposite actions of tranquilizers.

People with severe problems should even avoid the decaffeinated products. The flavor oils in coffee that give coffee its taste are irritating to a sensitive intestine.

These same comments go for tea, colas, and chocolate drinks. One reader wrote in frantically to tell me I must be wrong about cocoa. I wasn't. The bean that cocoa comes from, like the coffee bean, does contain caffeine.

Some people who think they have spastic colon really have other problems, including intolerance to milk and milk products. I think it is always worth a try to see if avoiding milk will relieve digestive complaints.

Burglars hit 2 businesses

PARMA — Two businesses, Parma Lumber Co. and W. L. Ramsey Equipment Co., were hit by burglars sometime Tuesday night.

A New Madrid County sheriff's deputy said approximately $700 worth of power tools was taken in a break-in at Parma Lumber Co. where a back door had been pried open.

Tractor radio equipment, one gun and 50 pocket knives, valued together at about $700, plus a small amount of cash, were stolen from the farm equipment company. A window had been pried open to gain entry.

What's the law?

The case of the sloppy wife

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Wilbur's briefcase proved to be a griefcase, one day, when his wife inadvertently found a sizzling love letter in it. Thereafter, she searched the briefcase every day. And while she tried to do so discreetly, she wasn't the kind of gal to win an award for neatness.

The result? Instead of finding more incriminating evidence, she only found trouble. Wilbur sued to end their marriage.

"Her prying has just become too trying," he complained to the judge, "and I can't take it any more. While I don't mind her snooping, her sloppiness is driving me crazy. She's constantly messing up my briefcase. She mixes up half of my papers and loses the rest."

"I'm sorry," responded Wilbur's wife in her defense but in looking through his briefcase, I wasn't looking for a Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval. I was looking for more love letters like the first one. Since philandering equals out my sloppiness, he's's got no right to end our marriage because of it."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you free Wilbur from his sloppy wife?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that human nature being what it is, and having found one love letter earlier, it would have been most remarkable if Wilbur's wife had not gone through his briefcase. What she did, concluded the judge, was only what might have been expected of her.

Broom factory thieves

50 years ago
January 3, 1925

Morehouse--Miss Myrtle Keeling from Illinois returned to her home on Thursday, after spending Christmas week visiting in the home of Taylor Todd.

During the past year F. M. Potter of the Sikeston Broom Mfg. Co., has manufactured and sold in Sikeston and vicinity an average of 75 dozen brooms per month. They employ three people all the time and have the equipment for two more helpers if the local merchants would buy their better grade of brooms from them. Their best grade is equal to the best made anywhere and is sold for about $1 less per dozen. Stamp of Approval

Rare stamps traditionally have lured investors. During World War II many European families converted their assets into stamps, a convenient investment medium virtually free of national or international restrictions. Some families fled to the United States with their stamps, then established themselves financially by selling their collections.

Dr. Lamb

Spastic colon can be helped

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you give me some information on spastic colon? I'm 36 years old and have this problem. Excitement seems to cause uncontrolled bowel movements, more than what I eat, although certain foods or coffee will do the same thing.

I have had this problem for six years. Quit drinking alcohol four years ago. My brother and sister also have this problem.

I had an X ray of my colon and the specialist told me there was nothing wrong, except a couple of spots on the intestinal wall. At times, the bowel movement may be firm, but it seems within a few minutes, it's right back to the bathroom.

DEAR READER — Spastic colon means that the muscles in the wall of the colon overcontract, or actually cramp. This makes it possible to have the food residue delayed in passage. During this delay, too much water is squeezed out and absorbed, causing small, hard, bowel movements.

The same rapid, excessive muscle contractions can cause diarrhea. It is not unusual to have both constipation and diarrhea with spastic colon.

You will need to set up a program of proper eating and actually train your bowel to help you avoid this problem. That covers a lot of territory. For more information on how to do this, write me at P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019, and ask for the booklet on spastic colon. Send 50 cents to cover costs.

It's true that excitement and psychological factors can influence how your colon reacts. That is why some doctors prescribe tranquilizers as part of the treatment program.

Coffee is something that anyone with digestive or bowel problems should avoid. The caffeine increases nervousness and has the opposite actions of tranquilizers.

People with severe problems should even avoid the decaffeinated products. The flavor oils in coffee that give coffee its taste are irritating to a sensitive intestine.

These same comments go for tea, colas, and chocolate drinks. One reader wrote in frantically to tell me I must be wrong about cocoa. I wasn't. The bean that cocoa comes from, like the coffee bean, does contain caffeine.

Some people who think they have spastic colon really have other problems, including intolerance to milk and milk products. I think it is always worth a try to see if avoiding milk will relieve digestive complaints.

Well baby clinic set

MOREHOUSE — A well baby clinic will be held by the New Madrid County Health Department from 9 a.m. to noon on Jan. 9 at the Kiwanis Club building on Beach Street.

Parents of eligible children are urged to contact Mrs. Helen Owings by Phone at 667-5041 or 667-5023.

Burglars hit 2 businesses

PARMA — Two businesses, Parma Lumber Co. and W. L. Ramsey Equipment Co., were hit by burglars sometime Tuesday night.

A New Madrid County sheriff's deputy said approximately $700 worth of power tools was taken in a break-in at Parma Lumber Co. where a back door had been pried open.

Tractor radio equipment, one gun and 50 pocket knives, valued together at about $700, plus a small amount of cash, were stolen from the farm equipment company. A window had been pried open to gain entry.

What's the law?

The case of the sloppy wife

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Wilbur's briefcase proved to be a griefcase, one day, when his wife inadvertently found a sizzling love letter in it. Thereafter, she searched the briefcase every day. And while she tried to do so discreetly, she wasn't the kind of gal to win an award for neatness.

The result? Instead of finding more incriminating evidence, she only found trouble. Wilbur sued to end their marriage.

"Her prying has just become too trying," he complained to the judge, "and I can't take it any more. While I don't mind her snooping, her sloppiness is driving me crazy. She's constantly messing up my briefcase. She mixes up half of my papers and loses the rest."

"I'm sorry," responded Wilbur's wife in her defense but in looking through his briefcase, I wasn't looking for a Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval. I was looking for more love letters like the first one. Since philandering equals out my sloppiness, he's's got no right to end our marriage because of it."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you free Wilbur from his sloppy wife?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that human nature being what it is, and having found one love letter earlier, it would have been most remarkable if Wilbur's wife had not gone through his briefcase. What she did, concluded the judge, was only what might have been expected of her.

Bell hearings set

JEFFERSON CITY — Persons who wish to testify before the Missouri Public Service Commission on the request of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. for a rate increase may do so next week at hearings in Cape Girardeau and Clayton.

The hearing in Cape Girardeau will be held Monday in the hall of the Arena Building in Arena Park. The afternoon session will begin at 1 p.m., and the evening session will start at 6 p.m.

The Clayton hearing will be held Tuesday in the St. Louis County Council chambers on the first floor of the government center office building. The morning session will begin at 10 a.m. and the evening session at 7 p.m. If more time is needed, the hearing will continue on Wednesday.

Any individual who wishes to testify before the commission will have an opportunity to do so.

Southwestern Bell has requested an increase in gross annual revenues of about $52 million. The rates proposed by the company have been suspended by the PSC.

Plenty of Steam

The first steam-powered automobile in the United States made its appearance around 1892 and had a top speed of 8 miles an hour. By 1906 an American-built Stanley Steamer held the world's speed record for autos — 127 m.p.h.

SPEAKING OF THE MOVIES

By Robert Klinge

"The Man With The Golden Gun" is the ninth in the scucessful series of James Bond films based on the novels of Ian Fleming, produced by Albert R. Broccoli and Harry Saltzman. As in "Live And Let Die," Roger Moore again stars in the role of Fleming's indestructible Agent 007. The picture released by United Artists, an entertainment servicce of Transamerica Corporation, will open today at the Mall Cinema.

In this latest adventure, set in south-east Asia, James Bond battles with the professional assassin Scaramanga, played by Christopher Lee, in his search for a missing Solex Agitator, which harnesses the energy of the sun for either good or evil purposes.

Scarmanga's price per killing is $1,000,000 and because he always uses a golden gun and bullet, he is known and feared throughout the world of espionage as "the man with the golden gun.'

Bond is assisted in his mission by the beautiful Mary Goodnight, portrayed in the film by the lovely and talented Britt Ekland. Also top featured are Maud Adams, as Scaramanga's girl friend Andrea, and Herve Villechaize, who plays Nick Nack, his man-servant, henchman and lethal companion.

Clifton James is specially featured as he recreates the character of Sheriff J. W Pepper of "Live and Let Die" fame.

Guy Hamilton, who directed previous Bond successes — "Goldfinger," "Diamonds Are Forever" and "Live And Let Die" — is at the helm of "The Man With The Golden Gun." The screenplay is by Richard Maibaumn and Tom Mankiewicz who have individually written or co-authored most of the series. Directing photography on his seventh 007 film is Ted Moore, B.S.C., who received an Academy Award for his work on "A Man For All Seasons."

The unique style and phenomenal success of these films is n ow part of the official history of the film industry.

Miles To Go Before I Sleep

In Color, Wednesday, January 8, 1975, 8:30-10:00 P.M., CST. (Pre-empts "Cannon" and "Manhunter" on this date only)

A ninety minute drama Special, MILES TO GO BEFORE I SLEEP, starring Martin Balsam as a lonely senior citizen who finds a new reason for living through a teen-age delinquent, will be presented on the CBS Television Network, Wednesday, January 8th. MILES TO GO BEFORE I SLEEP, the third "GE Theatre" presentation of the season, was produced by Herbert Hirsschman who also produced the acclaim "Tell Me Where It Hurts" and, more recently, the highly praised production of "Things In Their Season" starring Patricia Neal. The title is derived from the Robert Frost poem:

"But I have promises to keep,
And Miles to go before I sleep."

Martin Balsam portrays Ben, a senior citizen and widower who lives in a run-down Victorian building in Boston's "old" downtown in an untidy apartment where the television set is his only companion. It is through his granddaughter Maggie that Ben reaches a turning point in a life he has come to feel has no further meaning. Maggie, a counselor at Dartmouth Place, an "open door" treatment center for delinquent girls, senses Ben's loneliness and -- after much prodding -- convinces him to come to the center and act as a Foster Grandparent to one of her charges. His introduction to Robin, an obstinate 14-year-old car thief, is inauspicious.

After one look at Ben, Robin states: "I hate old people." Ben, with a cool look, zings back' "I hate teenagers."

How the two vividly desperate human beings break through the barriers of age, personality, morality and hostility to a tremulous but growing understanding and respect give MILE TO GO BEFORE I SLEEP touching dramatic clout.

Miles To Go Before I Sleep

In Color, Wednesday, January 8, 1975, 8:30-10:00 P.M., CST. (Pre-empts "Cannon" and "Manhunter" on this date only)

A ninety minute drama Special, MILES TO GO BEFORE I SLEEP, starring Martin Balsam as a lonely senior citizen who finds a new reason for living through a teen-age delinquent, will be presented on the CBS Television Network, Wednesday, January 8th. MILES TO GO BEFORE I SLEEP, the third "GE Theatre" presentation of the season, was produced by Herbert Hirsschman who also produced the acclaim "Tell Me Where It Hurts" and, more recently, the highly praised production of "Things In Their Season" starring Patricia Neal. The title is derived from the Robert Frost poem:

"But I have promises to keep,
And Miles to go before I sleep."

Martin Balsam portrays Ben, a senior citizen and widower who lives in a run-down Victorian building in Boston's "old" downtown in an untidy apartment where the television set is his only companion. It is through his granddaughter Maggie that Ben reaches a turning point in a life he has come to feel has no further meaning. Maggie, a counselor at Dartmouth Place, an "open door" treatment center for delinquent girls, senses Ben's loneliness and -- after much prodding -- convinces him to come to the center and act as a Foster Grandparent to one of her charges. His introduction to Robin, an obstinate 14-year-old car thief, is inauspicious.

After one look at Ben, Robin states: "I hate old people." Ben, with a cool look, zings back' "I hate teenagers."

How the two vividly desperate human beings break through the barriers of age, personality, morality and hostility to a tremulous but growing understanding and respect give MILE TO GO BEFORE I SLEEP touching dramatic clout.

Taryn Power cannot recollect father Tyrone

LOS ANGELES (AP) — She was born the daughter of a movie idol, and when she visited his Hollywood grave recently she tried to remember him. But Taryn Power, now 21, cannot summon a single recollection of her father, Tyrone.

"People tell me that I look like him," says the dark-haired, blue-eyed Taryn, who makes her American acting debut Jan. 10 in the NBC-TV special, "The Count of Monte Cristo."

"But I remember nothing. I was five years old when he died and my mother and he had left each other when I was three."

From her mother, actress Linda Christian, from his friends and from watching his old movies on TV, Taryn has learned about her famous father. But she wonders if she will ever know what he truly was like.

"It's very strange to hear people talk about him because he is so idealized," she said in an interview. "Ninety-nine point nine per cent of the people I've talked to about him have said only good things. It's as if he was a superhuman person."

Taryn is following closely in her father's tradition. Power, who died in 1958 at the age of 45, was the third Tyrone Power in his family to choose acting as a life's work. His great-grandfather was an Irish comedian and his father a Shakesperian actor. Because Power had no son, Taryn was given the feminine equivalent of his famous name.

"I never really decided to become an actress," she said. "I was brought up on acting. I kept trying to put off the decision. It seemed such an important thing being a professional something. Then I realized that acting was the only thing I really knew."

Taryn and her older sister, Romina, were raised in Rome, the city where their parents were married.

"I think my mother wanted us to live there because she had nostalgia for Daddy," Taryn said.

Three years ago she took her first professional role, starring in "Maria," a movie made in Colombia. Acting in Spanish didn't bother her; she is fluent in four languages and "gets along" in three others. She appeared in a second film last year in Argentina, then visited her mother who lives in Marbell, Spain, where she has become a painter. When Taryn returned to Rome, she was greeted with an offer — the role in "The Count of Monte Cristo."

Taryn, who portrays Valentine, daughter of de Villefort, costars with such luminaries as Richard Chamberlain, Trevor Howard, Donald Pleasance, Tony Curtis and Louis Jourdan, who plays her father. The TV special, which was filmed in Italy, will be released as a feature film in Europe.

What do stars do on vacation?
Produce a movie - of course!

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What do television series stars do during their between-season vacations? In the case of Michael Douglas, he's producing a $3-million movie.

The talented son of Kirk Douglas finished his third season of "The Streets of San Francisco" this month. In January he starts producing "One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest" starring Jack Nicholson and directed by Milos Forman. The film will be made almost entirely at the Oregon State Mental Hospital at Salem.

Young Douglas, 30, is an example of a modern maverick working inside the Establishment. It seemed inevitable that he would go into acting — his mother, Diana Dill, is an actress, and his father is one of the screen's most durable stars.

"One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest" has a long history, dating back to 1963, when Kirk Douglas starred in the Broadway play. It had a one-month run, but was not a success.

"People came out of the play loving it," said Michael, "but they told their friends, 'It's okay — if you like laughing at crazy people.' Attitudes toward mental illness were different then."

Kirk Douglas bought the movie rights and twice neared production, but the deals fell through. Law suits over ownership of the property further stalled the film version, and Douglas decided three years ago to dispose of the play.

"Let me take it over," his son urged. "I can at least get back what you put into it."

Characteristically, Michael Douglas declined to take "Cuckoo's Nest" to major companies, seeking instead to make the film with complete independence. He finally found a backer: Sol Zaentz, operator of the Berkeley-based Fantasy Records, home of the Credence Clearwater Revival and other rock stars.

The movie, as well as other factors, appears to have interrupted plans for Douglas to marry actress Brenda Vaccaro, with whom he has lived for five years. "With all the work I've had preparing the picture, plus problems with the families, it got to be too much of a hassle," said Douglas.

Rudyard Kiplings'. . .
RIKKI-TIKKI-TAVI
Debuts on CBS Jan. 9

In Color, Thursday, January 9, 1975, 7:00-7:30 P.M. CST.

An animated version of Rudyard Kipling's delightful fable RIKKI-TIKKI-TAVI, adapted from his classic "Jungle Book" story, debuts on the CBS Television Network, January 9th in the 8:00-8:30 PM, CNYT time period. This unique presentation is narrated by distinguished actor- director Orson Welles, who is also the voice of RIKKI-TIKKI-TAVI. The special will be followed by an 8:30-9:30 PM edition of "The Waltons," then "The Revel" -- third in a mini-series of Benjammin Franklin specials -- from 9:30 - 11:00 PM, cnyt

RIKKI-TIKKI-TAVI is the exotically picturesque, humorous and suspenseful story of a mongoose who is saved from drowning by a boy and his parents who live on a plantation in the East Indian of the Victorian Era. The mischievous mongoose soon becomes a beloved member of the family, but his natural role as arch enemy of the cobra is soon put to the t est when the family is threatened by Nat Nag and Nagaina, the dreaded cobras that room the compound. Even after Rikki wins a fateful battle-to-the death with Nag, it is Nagaina who puts him to his decisive confrontation. Nagaina slithers into the houses and poises, ready to strike young Teddy, and Rikki must quickly find a way to distract Nagaina before she can inflict a fatal wound upon his beloved young master. It is only when Rikki steals one of Nagaina's eggs that the wicked cobra is lured out in to the open courtyard for a fateful showdown.

What do stars do on vacation?
Produce a movie - of course!

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What do television series stars do during their between-season vacations? In the case of Michael Douglas, he's producing a $3-million movie.

The talented son of Kirk Douglas finished his third season of "The Streets of San Francisco" this month. In January he starts producing "One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest" starring Jack Nicholson and directed by Milos Forman. The film will be made almost entirely at the Oregon State Mental Hospital at Salem.

Young Douglas, 30, is an example of a modern maverick working inside the Establishment. It seemed inevitable that he would go into acting — his mother, Diana Dill, is an actress, and his father is one of the screen's most durable stars.

"One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest" has a long history, dating back to 1963, when Kirk Douglas starred in the Broadway play. It had a one-month run, but was not a success.

"People came out of the play loving it," said Michael, "but they told their friends, 'It's okay — if you like laughing at crazy people.' Attitudes toward mental iliness were different then."

Kirk Douglas bought the movie rights and twice neared production, but the deals fell through. Law suits over ownership of the property further stalled the film version, and Douglas decided three years ago to dispose of the play.

"Let me take it over," his son urged. "I can at least get back what you put into it."

Characteristically, Michael Douglas declined to take "Cuckoo's Nest" to major companies, seeking instead to make the film with complete independence. He finally found a backer: Sol Zaentz, operator of the Berkeley-based Fantasy Records, home of the Credence Clearwater Revival and other rock stars.

The movie, as well as other factors, appears to have interrupted plans for Douglas to marry actress Brenda Vaccaro, with whom he has lived for five years. "With all the work I've had preparing the picture, plus problems with the families, it got to be too much of a hassle," said Douglas.

Atop the giant rocket-supporting gantry that towers over the NASA Kennedy Space Center in Florida, a bright orange hardhat is sighted on a catwalk ladder. A pair of heavy tortoise-shell glasses appears below the hat, framing an unruly shock of red hair and a liberal splattering of freckles. It's 12-year-old actor Michael Link stealing his way up the structure to stow away aboard the fictional "Camelot Odyssey" command module for an incredible journey to the moon.

Michael, who co-starred in the "Julia" television series, portrays a determined boy who becomes the uninvited fourth astronaut on a space mission, in "Stowaway to the Moon" family adventure drama, Friday, Jan. 10 (7:00-9:00 P.M. CST) on the CBS Television Network.

A down-to-earth version of the youth he plays in "Stoway to the Moon," Michael, who is "interested in life on other planets," notes, with a wide grin, that "we both read a lot and wear glasses."

Michael, who began acting in television commercials at age three pursues many interests. A first-string player on his school soccer team, he also races on a bicycle, is an avid reader of adventure stories and biographies, and loves the traveling acting requires.

Actually, he has no definite plans, as yet, for a career. "I have time to think about that later," he shrugs. "Besides, I like all different kinds of things. I am interested in space -- but not as much as soccer."
